Egad! Six Months Later And They're Still There

DUNCAN — Six months ago Duncan Jaycees became one of the first Jaycee units in North America to admit women members — and the reverberations are still shaking the Island.

Duncan members of both sexes seem to be generally satisfied with their history-making move, but other Jaycee units on Vancouver Island are aghast at the thought that this insidious female invasion of their all-male bastion may spread.

★

It could be an infection about as welcome as smallpox.

That, at least, was the view which crystallized here last weekend when 150 delegates from Vancouver Island and Powell River branches attended their annual mini-convention.

Although the topic was not down for official discussion, these were some of the deep-rooted fears and anxieties which surfaced in conversation with pale-face, worried-looking men:

—That the presence of women members will put a dampener on their cherished atmosphere of good-guys-together bonhomie;

—That the admission of single women as members will lead to problems with jealous wives at home;

—And that the men won't accept the women as equals.

Take Wayne Schaad, 28, of Campbell River, for instance. He says he would "fight like a fiend" if all units of Jaycees were ordered to allow women in — as Duncan was told to do by the national executive last October.

"My reasoning is based mainly on emotion rather than principle," he frankly admitted, "but I feel women allowed in right now would destroy Jaycees."

"It's a guy's night out. There will be language and joke barriers."

Theirs always has been and always should be a male organization, he insisted. "I just can't see women fitting into the Jaycee type of environment."

Another opponent of the idea, John Thelacker, 30, of the San Juan, Washington, Jaycee chapter, painted a truly horrifying picture of some of the problems that might result from integration.

Noting that one of the basic concepts of jaycees is "doing things together," he asked: "What will happen if a softball team with women in it decided to take a shower?"

What indeed.

There were, too, the more moderately expressed views, like that of Nanaimo Jaycee member Wayne Cobb.

He said he would like to see a female unit formed in that city as a separate entity.

"I am not a male chauvinist pig but I want a men's night out," he said. "I don't see why women have to invade everything that men do or vice versa."

Meanwhile, there were few signs of the predicted problems and frictions evident in the Duncan unit, where the five female members are all wives of Jaycees.

(Two more were to be inducted into the group Saturday evening, but many Jaycees said they would walk out of the convention if this was done.)

Duncan president Wayne Buck, 30, feels that women in his club have proved to be a "tremendous asset." Not only has it increased the club's membership to 25, Buck said his group could not have carried the mini-convention off half as successfully without the women to take care of most of the organizing.

★

"The women have been involved in all of our projects and contribute in many ways," Buck said. "Women in the club have brought a lot of respectability to it. The men watch their language, there is no gambling or horsing around. We stick strictly to business."

Past president of the local unit, Harry Girgulis, who was also chairman of the convention, said at first he was 100 per cent against women in Jaycees.

"After this convention I have reconsidered and am 100 per cent behind them."

Girgulis said that within the next five years women will belong to most units in British Columbia.

"It is inevitable and there is nothing we can do to stop it."

He said he would agree to separate units for men and women Jaycees.

"Right now Duncan's the only place where women can benefit from the training Jaycees receive. They are considered as equals in our unit."

Ellen Buck, the president's wife and one of the first women members of Jaycees, said she is proud to be a Jaycee "because she feels she is contributing more this way than she did as a Jaycee-ette (which is a subsidiary group formed of wives of Jaycees)."

★

"We don't interfere with men's night out because we don't push ourselves in when they don't want us. We have the full support of all of the men behind us."

Mrs. Buck feels separate units for men and women would just be useless repetition. "One strong club is better than two separate smaller ones."

Linda McLeod, a new member about to be inducted into the club who has attended several meetings, said: "I would like to know in what parliamentary procedure there is swearing and carrying on allowed?"

"If the men want to go out and carry on like that after the meeting they are welcome to it. Jaycees are for people and not just for men."

Mrs. McLeod said the women did not join the club for a women's liberation stand but for the betterment of themselves, the club and a common interest with their husbands.

"If the men didn't want us in we would soon know about it."

"There are Jaycees that have a very broad view," quipped Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife while discussing the controversy. Quaife and his wife Carol are both members of the local unit of Jaycees.

District Jaycee-ette Gerry Robins, of Victoria, said she would like to see women throughout Jaycee units but as a separate entity.

"I feel we should have two clubs, men and women, and let single women join. We could get together on big projects," she said.

Reds Storm Provincial Capital

Times News Services

SAIGON — North Vietnamese troops storming the capital of An Loc today took control of at least half the town.

It was the second major assault on the town 60 miles north of Saigon and the North Vietnamese vowed they would capture An Loc, and establish a provisional capital for the Viet Cong.

Spearheaded by captured South Vietnamese tanks, the North Vietnamese fought bitter street battles with the defenders. The South Vietnamese sent out an urgent appeal for reinforcements and one military source in Saigon said "the outlook there is very bad."

A South Vietnamese military spokesman said that as many as 30 tracked vehicles had been destroyed or damaged in the fierce street fighting. He did not say how many were on each side.

Official reports reaching Saigon said the northern half of An Loc was in North Vietnamese hands and tanks had taken over the airfield.

It was the first time the North Vietnamese succeeded in entering An Loc in their offensive, now in its 15th day.

A U.S. pilot flying over the beleagured town radioed to a 20,000-man relief column 15 miles to the south:

"There's a perimeter government defensive position on the southern edge of town. That's about the only friendly place in this whole country up here."

The relief column remained stalled because of Communist shellings. The commander of the column's spearhead, an armored cavalry regiment, was killed when a rifle bullet hit him in the head as he flew by helicopter over the battle zone checking on his tanks.

The commander of the military region surrounding Saigon, said at least 10 tanks had been destroyed inside the town and that 200 North Vietnamese had been killed in the first few hours of heavy fighting.

The South Vietnamese said 641 government troops were killed and 2,166 were wounded in the week ending April 8 compared with 466 dead and 1,073 injured in the previous week. Saigon claimed killing 2,987 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers compared with 2,150 the previous week. There were 12 U.S. combat deaths.

Elsewhere in the war, the North Vietnamese shelled four U.S. bases along the central and northern coast and the coastal city of Qui Nhon, 275 miles northeast of Saigon. A rocket attack on the Da Nang air base killed 14 South Vietnamese civilians, wounded 11 American servicemen and 25 South Vietnamese civilians, destroyed an American plane and damaged nine U.S. and South Vietnamese aircraft. Another American was killed and two were wounded in other attacks.

The United States sent its B-52 bombers deeper into North Vietnam than ever before to attack the Bai Thuong MiG air base 150 miles northwest of the demilitarized zone plus fuel and supply depots. Radio Hanoi claimed that four U.S. planes were shot down, including a B-52, but informants in Saigon said no U.S. planes were lost.

★ NIXON ARRIVES TODAY

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — President Nixon, who arrives in Ottawa for a three-day visit at 3:30 p.m. today (Victoria time) was cloistered at nearby Camp David earlier today to put the finishing touches on a speech that could mean the success or failure of the journey.

Few U.S. officials expect anything approaching meaningful negotiations during the visit. It comes at a time when economic disagreements beset the two countries.

About 2½ hours of private discussions between Nixon and Canadian Prime Miniter Trudeau are scheduled, and they are expected to touch on differences only in broad terms.

Nixon faces a re-election test in November and Trudeau must call an election before mid-1973, making meaningful negotiations even more difficult.

For Trudeau, more than Nixon, across-the-border relations are a major political issue, making major concessions before the elections virtually impossible.

ALL'S QUIET on the protest front as demonstrators wave placards on Parliament Hill, criticizing President Nixon and his U.S. policy during his visit to Canada today. One-year-old Savannah Partridge, of Montreal, lost interest early in the demonstration and found her thumb and sleep preferable to watching the placard wavers.

Housing Funds Primed

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Wednesday he will introduce legislation "within a few weeks" to encourage the flow of private funds into housing.

Mr. Basford told a meeting of the Toronto Home Builders Association the legislation has three main thrusts. It will establish a central mortgage bank which will trade in residential mortgages, permit the creation of real estate investment trusts in Canada and create a new mortgage instrument —the variable-term mortgage loan.

"To meet the necessary targets for housing in Canada over the next decade will call for an investment of more than $41 billion," he said.

"We are rapidly moving to a point where an annual investment in the order of $5 billion will be required to satisfy the financial needs of residential construction programs."

As an example of the kind of money he hoped to attract through the new financing vehicles, Mr. Basford pointed to the $84 billion in assets held by life insurance companies, chartered banks, trust and loan companies, and trusteed pension plans.

"At the end of 1970, only 20 per cent of the total assets of these institutions were allocated to mortgages in various types of real estate. Indeed, in the last 15 years, that ratio has only been exceeded on two occasions.

IRA Violence Soars; RCs Plead for Lull

BELFAST (UPI — Irish Republican extremists today mounted their most extensive bombing and shooting campaign since Britain imposed direct rule over Northern Ireland two weeks ago.

The British army said an elderly woman was killed and at least eight other persons were injured or wounded. Scores of shops and a number of vehicles were wrecked in bombing and shooting incidents throughout most of the province.

The intensive violence came despite renewed appeals from Roman Catholic civil rights groups to the Irish Republican Army to end its bombing and shooting campaign or risk civil war in Northern Ireland.

The army said Mrs. Elizabeth McAuley was the 302nd person killed in three years of violence when a 100-pound gelignite bomb blasted a draper's store in Ballymoney, a predominantly Protestant village 40 miles northwest of Belfast Thursday. Her husband was cut and bruised in the explosion.

Dozens of shops were damaged in the border town of Castlederg when a car bomb exploded in the main street. Two policemen were injured.

PIGS HAVE CLASS, AS WELL AS ULCERS

RIDGETOWN, Ont. (CP) — Pigs are like people and they have their ulcers to prove it.

Researchers have found swine have their bosses, their followers, their worries, their power struggles and their environmental stresses — just like humans.

Pigs have a fairly well-defined social structure and tend to ostracize those who try to ignore it.

Like humans, pigs do a lot better when they are happy and satisfied.

J. R. Morris, livestock specialist at Ridgetown College of Agriculture Technology in this community about 15 miles east of Chatham, Ont., said in an interview Wednesday pork producers have to understand the pig's social world in order to produce pork economically.

In other words, a happy and healthy pig is a fat pig — and a fat pig brings in more money.

★ Peace Bid Argued

PARIS (UPI) — On April 1 President Nixon secretly asked the Vietnamese Communists to resume the peace talks today but the Communists responded with an invasion of South Vietnam, U.S. Ambassador William Porter said.

A Viet Cong spokesman charged "there has never been any such message for us. Only yesterday, the American side rejected our latest appeal to resume the talks."

U.S. delegation spokesman Stephen Ledogar dismissed the Viet Cong claim. He indicated the U.S. administration has sent the message to North Vietnam which has failed to inform the Viet Cong.

Meanwhile in Washington, 17 Senate and 34 House of Representatives members expressed concern to Nixon over what they said "appears to be a major re-escalation of U.S. involvement in the war."

In a letter to the president, they asked him for a full report on contemplated U.S. military action in Indochina.

"If news reports are accurate, our country is now assembling in Southeast Asia one of the largest air armadas in military history," the Members of Congress for Peace Through Law told Nixon.

Strike Front Broken

Times News Services

MONTREAL — A strike by a common front of unions representing 210,000 Quebec public service workers ran into some resistance in its third day today.

Union leaders of three locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing some 8,500 Hydro-Quebec employees, withdrew from the common front and instructed its members to obey court injunctions.

The provincial police riot squad moved in to watch about 250 pickets around the courthouse building in downtown Montreal and ensure access to the building for justice officials.

But the situation in the province's hospitals continued to deteriorate, despite efforts by the provincial government to enforce back-to-work injunctions at institutions considered in a critical state.

Jean-Paul L'Allier, public service minister, said in Quebec City Wednesday night the general effects of the province-wide strike were serious but not alarming.

He announced that the government has obtained contempt of court citations against unions which have failed to provide essential hospital services in the Quebec City area.

The government's moves indicated a cautious reaction to the telegram from the Association of Hospitals of the Province of Quebec warning that patients at 14 hospitals for the

Quake Diggers Find 3 Alive

GHIR, Iran (Reuter) — Three persons were dug out alive Wednesday from the ruins of this village, devastated by Monday's earthquake — now known to have claimed about 3,800 lives in Iran's southern province of Fars.

Rescue workers reached them after they had been trapped for more than 50 hours.

One was a woman of 70, another an elderly man, and the third a boy.

The women's face was dusty and caked with dried blood. She could hardly walk, but refused a stretcher and shuffled along to a medical tent with a soldier holding each arm.

Discovery of the three survivors was an almost unhoped-for success for the soldiers, police and villagers still digging in the rubble.

No immediate details were available about the new tremors, but the radio described one as "very strong."

Lunch Bucket Menu for Cabinet?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial cabinet has invited itself to dinner — more than 10 dinners, in fact — most of its prospective hosts are less than enthusiastic.

The cabinet is planning a tour of the province later this spring, and mayors of municipalities scheduled to be visited received letters Wednesday asking them to sponsor dinners or luncheons for the ministers.

"I think we should all get them lunch buckets," said Mayor Gordon Nichol of Kamloops. "The last time they were here it cost the city $1,400 and people complained."

Mayor Pete Lester of Prince Rupert said: "Ours will probably be a no-host luncheon."

"They'll be handing out $1,000 bills wherever they go," Mayor Lester said. "What can you do? After all, the man's (W. A. C. Bennett) the premier of the province. Last time he was up here he was handing out superports. But he got so excited he gave ours to Williams Lake instead. (That's 300 miles from salt water.)

"I suppose the least we can get for a $350 lunch is between $50,000 and $100,000 — in announcements."

Mayor Lester said the letter, from Deputy Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace, said:

"I wonder if you and your council would like to host and honor the premier with a luncheon at 12 noon Monday, May 29. The premier will have two presentations to make to you on that date, one of historical significance."

The letter went on to ask for confirmation of the lunch and requested the complete guest list by May 5.

"I suppose they want the guest list because they can make other arrangements if they don't like who we've asked," Mayor Lester quipped.

Mayor F. E. DeVito of Trail said he wouldn't mind giving the cabinet a luncheon if the announcement had come in a different form.

"The impression was that they were coming and we should do something about it. Normally one would expect we would have been asked in a discreet way whether we would like to have them."

Mayor Harold Moffat of Prince George and H. W. Buckle of Kimberley said they were in favor of the tour and didn't mind giving the cabinet a meal.

'IMPOSSIBLE' HAPPENED

Lorrell was born April 8. So was her mother Joyce. So was her grandmother and her great-grandmother.

Mrs. Eilhelm, 27, a housewife, from Woodanilling, 200 miles southeast of Perth, said Monday: "All those who said it couldn't be done pay — in champagne."

A gynaecologist said it was an "impossible coincidence."

CFAX PRESIDENT DEFENDS SCHEME

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

Victoria's CFAX radio president Clare Copeland said today he doesn't understand why NDP leader Dave Barrett attacked him and his companies' operations Wednesday.

Barrett has charged that Copeland has associated himself with the "Social Credit propaganda machine" because he was an initiator of a government advertising program called Ask Your Provincial Government.

The NDP leader told a press conference Wednesday Copeland's role in helping develop Ask Your Provincial Government has made the operations of a CFAX-owned legislative news service here "suspect."

"What he's trying to do is bring in an association of B.C. Radio News with this other communication vehicle we sold to them (the government)."

SUBSIDIARY

Copeland said Ask Your Provincial Government was an idea he developed with New Westminster radio station CKNW manager Mel Cooper after reading the Keith Davey Senate report on the Mass Media.

Copeland explained that Ask Your Provincial Government is a means for the government to communicate poli-

IBEW Serves Strike Notice

VANCOUVER — Strike notice was served Wednesday on 44 lower mainland contractors by Local 213 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Jim Kinnaird, business agent for the local, said the action was taken because negotiations for a new contract are deadlocked.

He said the men would go on strike at any time after Monday.

Kinnaird, who is also president of the B.C. and Yukon Trades Council, said there has been no progress in negotiations "and all the unions are frustrated. It looks like we're heading for a collision course."

Earlier, the United Association of Journeymen Plumbers Local 170 served strike notice on four Vancouver area contractors.

Construction Labor Relations Association responded by initiating an industry-wide lockout vote, among 800 contractors. Result is expected to be know just after the weekend.

Almost all building union agreements, covering 60,000 workers, expired March 31.

INQUEST WEDNESDAY IN LADINIG DEATH

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has scheduled an inquest next Wednesday night into the death of Karl Wolfgang Ladinig, 19, of 3 Mark Lane Road north of Durrance Lake.

The inquest was ordered by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson at the request of the dead man's father, Karl Ladinig Sr. The man requested the inquest as a means of probing the question of emergency services in unorganized areas of the peninsula.

Young Ladinig was pronounced dead in hospital at 9:15 a.m. March 21, after he was taken there in an RCMP cruiser. His father had first called police for help at 7:40 a.m.

WCB Handles Claims

Persons wishing to claim benefits under British Columbia's Criminal Injuries Compensation Act will be able to do so by contacting offices of the Workmen's Compensation Board, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said today.

The act has been proclaimed effective July 1. Peterson said benefits will be able to be allowed without the necessity of a full WCB hearing. This will cut red tape. He wouldn't say how much it is going to cost to administer the act but indicated that costs would be greater as years pass and more people claim benefits.

The act provides cash payments of varying amounts for victims of crimes such as assault, rape or attempted murder. WCB officers will hive complete details on payment schedules and what crimes are included in the act. Peterson said the federal government has not yet decided whether to participate in financing the program, but he said the payments in the B.C. system will be the "most generous in Canada.

The program will consist of 10 one-minute question and answer sessions with B.C. cabinet ministers to be run during the next four months. The government hopes to buy radio time on all stations in B.C.

PUBLIC INVOLVED

Questions will originate with the public, but they will be asked by a government employee during taping sessions in the offices of the cabinet ministers.

Copeland said the program will give a two-way flow of information between the government and the people which is not ordinarily available on newscasts and newspaper stories.

He said news traditionally has been a one-way system. The only opportunity the public has had for dialogue in the past has been through letters to editors or by questioning newsmakers on open-line radio shows.

NOT SPONTANEOUS

Copeland admitted that selecting the questions in advance and taping the answers is not as spontaneous as live radio questioning by the public, but he pointed out that the answers can be boiled down into their clearest form through taping.

He said the Davey report showed him that governments need to better communicate with the public through the media, and Ask Your Provincial Government will help meet this need.

Opposition party leaders have demanded equal time to explain their policies and have charged that the new program is nothing more than government advertising at taxpayers' expense.

Barrett estimated Ask Your Provincial Government could cost up to $200,000. Copeland said the program is not different in principle with government advertising in newspapers, but it goes beyond this because of the question and answer feature lacking in newspaper ads.

GOOD POINT

He said the opposition politicians who have demanded equal time have a "good point," but they are able to go to the media to refute or argue with anything the cabinet ministers may say on Ask Your Provincial Government.

Copeland suggested Barrett understand the show in terms of the government's responsibility to explain itself to the voter citizens.

"If Barrett could look beyond being in opposition, he could understand that this is a pretty interesting vehicle for the government that has been chosen to govern," he said.

The CFAX president said there is no conflict of interest in his activities developing Ask Your Provincial Government and head of the company which owns B.C. Radio News.

"I'm not a newsman," Copeland said, pointing to his duties as administrator and manager of his radio station.

He repeated statements made Wednesday by BCRN news director Tony Cox that there is no connection between BCRN and Ask Your Provincial Government.

Copeland said he met the NDP caucus in February to explain BCRN's operations and to encourage the party to use it. Barrett said Wednesday he did encourage his party members to use the news service, and he said he was not implying that it has been biased in its coverage of the NDP.

Copeland said he thinks Barrett believes BCRN is making a lot of money for CFAX. Barrett had charged that BCRN was "wholesaling the news" at government expense through a provincial telephone system called Telepak.

Refugees Start Pox Epidemic

DACCA (WP) — Refugees returning to Bangladesh from India have brought a serious smallpox epidemic in which about 7,000 people have died, according to medical sources.

The disease had been almost eradicated from this region in the last few years by a large-scale vaccination campaign, but India's neighborning state of West Bengal has been less successful in controlling smallpox and several of the crowded refugee camps became infected.

On top of all the other enormous problems of rebuilding Bangladesh after the destruction of its war for independence, government officials are now faced with having to launch a new, expensive program to wipe out the disease. The deaths have occurred over the last two months and medical authorities believe the epidemic will continue for about another two months.

This time of the year, just before the arrival of the Monsoon, has traditionally been the period of greatest smallpox infection in this part of the world. A major problem in controlling the disease is finding all the cases.

Teachers Want To Make Point

Saanich teachers voted Wednesday night to form a "public information committee" to correct what a spokesman called "irrational" statements by Saanich school board chairman Jack Armstrong.

The committee was formed partially in response to statements by Armstrong last weekend in which the chairman was critical of the B.C. Teachers Federation.

"It was unanimously decided that a committee be struck to voice the point of view of the Saanich Teachers Association," a spokesman said this morning.

"Continuous misleading public statements" by Armstrong "are not a true representation of the Saanich School Board opinions or policies and definitely need clarification.

"The statements made tend to undermine the good relationships that the Saanich teachers have had with their board of trustees in the past.

"The function of this committee shall be to provide informational releases from time to time to keep the public informed on educational issues.

"The association at present is looking into implications of recent legislative changes on learning conditions within the district."

SANTIAGO (Reuter) — Some 250,000 anti-Communist Chileans marched in protest against the socialist policies of their president Wednesday night, and one of their leaders hinted that armed violence may follow.

chronically ill and mentally-ill would be in a precarious position today if something was not done.

Early today, all but about 100 Hydro-Quebec workers were back on the job after the CUPE locals withdrew from the common front composed of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, Quebec Federation of Labor and Quebec Teachers Corp. The three labor groups called the strike to back wage and job security demands in negotiations with the provincial government.

Meanwhile, in Toronto, garbage bags piled up in parks and other open spaces and neighborhood residents expressed concern over the possible public health hazard.

Since Monday, the city and boroughs of York and East York have been without garbage pickup service because of a strike of more than 4,000 civic outside workers. Collections in Scarborough will end Saturday when its only dump becomes filled.

The strikers, members of CUPE Local 43, walked out in support of their demand for a 38-cent-hourly increase in each year of a two-year contract. They have been offered 18 cents in the first year and 15 cents in the second.

The workers—water filtration and sewage plant employees, road and sidewalk repairmen, parks employees, ferry operators and ambulance drivers as well as the garbage crews — averaged $3.58 an hour under their old contract.

And in Vancouver civic employees' representatives, encouraged by Wednesday's strike mandate from New Westminster locals, are planning further strike action in an attempt to improve the contract offered by seven lower mailand municipalities.

Jack Phillips, a spokesman for the workers, said about 300 members of the New Westminster locals of CUPE and the municipal and regional employees union had voted "better than two to one" in favor of strike action.

About 3,000 civic workers in Vancouver walked out Tuesday for 24 hours.

Mayors of the seven municipalities involved in negotiations with the unions decided Wednesday not to increase their current offer of a 9.55 per cent wage hike over one year.

The unions said they had initially demanded a 20 per cent increase but had later dropped their demand to 14 per cent.

They are expected to meet within the next two days to plan further action.

Warren Vows He'd Grub Right in as B.C. Premier

If the Progressive Conservatives form a provincial government in B.C. under Derril Warren, the premier will also be the minister of labor.

"Some will say the premier shouldn't be down grubbing with labor unions and management . . . but I totally reject that," Warren told the Victoria Chamber of Commerce Wednesday.

He said he would practise the "politics of prevention" in the labor-management field by attempting to defuse conflicts before they reach the explosive point.

"It is time someone showed some leadership, time someone was prepared to get their hands dirty," said Warren.

STANDING OVATION

The 32-year-old Vancouver lawyer received a standing ovation from many of the 150 members of the chamber at the noon luncheon after his low-keyed address.

In an interview later, Warren said he would be a premier-labor minister because labor relations is "the most pressing problem facing B.C. today."

He said it was possible a dual ministry of labor in which he would share responsibilities with another minister could be established to ease the pressure on the premier's duties.

Warren paid tribute to former federal Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey as an example of a labor minister who wasn't afraid to "get his fingernails dirty" in the labor-management arena.

During his address, he said that unlike Premier Bennett, he would not be the minister of finance in his own government.

Bennett has concentrated excessive power in that office, he said, citing 18 new bills approved by the legislature this year putting an additional $660,000 in spending power under Bennett. He said Bennett's cabinet lacks depth and talent because of Bennett's use of power.

REJECTS METHOD

"It is Machiavellian and I totally reject it," Warren said, promising that a Conservative government would be composed of the best available people sharing in the full responsibilities of government.

Warren also said Premier Bennett practises the "Machiavellian politics of division" on society, pitting doctors against public and teacher against ratepayers.

A Conservative government would be decisive, not divisive, he said, adding that Bennett also attempts to turn "province against province" by appealing to low instincts in arguing for a better distribution of national wealth.

Warren said he agreed that B.C. isn't fairly treated under the equalization grant system, but added that he has been told by an adviser to Prime Minister Trudeau that B.C. has "left money on the table in Ottawa" simply by its failure in inter-governmental relations.

Warren said the Conservative Party has drawn up a list of principles which, if a little vague at the moment, would still provide the basis for the actions of a Conservative government to be tested for consistency.

One of the principles, he said, is that the right to debate both sides of issues such as the lawful use of cigarettes and alcohol is a fundamental right in a democracy.

For that reason, he said, the Conservative Party is opposed to the provincial government's ban on cigarette and alcohol advertising, currently being tested in the courts. Warren continued his theme of praising the past performance of Premier Bennett in most fields but citing the need for an alternative, contemporary government to meet the problems of the 1970s.

He said membership in the Conservative Party has increased from 1,600 to 5,000 since last November when he became leader.

He said in an interview he is "delighted" with the calibre of party candidates lined up to contest Victoria area ridings in the next provincial election but couldn't reveal any names at the present time.

Asked if any of the candidates currently hold municipal office, he said "not necessarily." He didn't want to break any "confidences" by revealing names at this time.

During his speech, he said candidates lined up across the province include a wide spectrum of society including municipal officials.

First Failure-to-Appear Trial Finds Man Guilty

A city man was found guilty and fined today following the area's first full-fledged trial on a charge of violating liberal new provisions of the Bail Act.

Gino Vogrig, 27, of 906 Gordon, was fined $35 or ordered to spend five days in jail.

He was arrested April 8 for obstructing a police officer when he started a fight in the Fisgard Street station in connection with the arrest of a friend of his on another matter.

Vogrig was released by police after signing a promise to appear in court at 10 a.m. on the obstruction charge. He failed to show up and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

The accused testified today he was needed at the store where he works as a salesman. He called police half an hour after he was scheduled to appear, then turned himself in at the station at 11 a.m.

Judge William Ostler said the bail reform provisions were commendable in helping to ensure that no person is held in custody pending hearing of a charge — if there is reason to believe he will appear on schedule.

"The provisions are enlightened, but they have got to be strictly obeyed," Ostler said. An indication of how seriously Parliament regards violations of the act is that a maximum sentence of two years in prison is provided, he said.

The judge said the Vogrig case warranted leniency because the accused failed to appear on grounds that he thought he was needed at work.

Vogrig was given two weeks to pay the $35 fine.

He pleaded guilty to the obstruction charge Monday and was fined $200.

Vogrig was the second person sentenced in provincial court on a failure-to-appear offence. Patrick Joseph Duffy was jailed three days Monday after he pleaded guilty to not responding to an appearance notice in connection with a charge of causing a disturbance by being drunk.

Since the bail reform provisions went into effect at the first of the year, court officials report almost no violations of the appearance notice system. Appearances as ordered are being recorded "in 98 per cent of our cases," a spokesman said this morning.

The "promise to appear" has replaced arrests in many of the minor offences brought before provincial courts.

Sunro Ore Consigned To Germany

By mid-June it is hoped that a first shipment of 2,000 tons of concentrate will be loaded at Hatch Point en route to North Deutsch Affinerie, of Hamburg, which has contracted to buy the first year's production with option to renew.

The mine has been out of production since 1968 and has been object in the past two years of a $2 million capital rehabilitation project by Dison International Ltd. and Pechiney Development Ltd.

Pechiney president Andre Haillot, Vancouver, said the current tuneup period likely would last until late June, when the mine was expected to be in full production at its rated milling capacity of 1,500 tons a day.

Although not wishing to make an estimate until the program is fully assessed, sometime in July he thought, the total ore reserves could exceed 3 million tons.

Restoration Plans Firmer

Restoration of the Simon Leiser building on lower Yates for use as Capital Regional government offices appears more certain following an announcement Wednesday.

A press release from the Heritage Foundation of B.C. says that body will acquire and refurbish the Simon Leiser building for a figure close to $250,000.

The building was erected in the 1890s and was used most recently as a warehouse by the T. Eaton Co.

Heritage Foundation president Ainslie Helmcken said in the release the preservation of the building "could be the keynote in a program to inject new life into that part of the city."

"It is planned that the two top floors of the building will be occupied by the administrative offices of the Regional Board of the Capital District after reconditioning.

"This would leave the ground floor open for tenancy. The revenues accumulated will be husbanded and used in the acquisition and development of other worthwhile projects."

April 21 has been set for a full examination of plans for the building.

The Heritage Foundation of B.C. is the name adopted by the members of Greater Victoria Historic Building Foundation in November 1959.

New Answers for New Problems

The paradox of higher unemployment and higher employment is still found throughout Canada, according to the latest federal statistics, and the trend is most evident in British Columbia. A late spring, a large influx of unemployed persons to this coastal province and a hesitation on the part of many businesses to embark on large-scale expansion are among reasons given for the higher figures in B.C.

Unemployed totals increased in this province in March by 17 per cent compared with February, leaving 8.6 per cent of the working force registered as without jobs. This compares with a national rate of 7.4 per cent, slightly less than a year ago, whereas British Columbia's rate is slightly more than in March, 1971.

One of the difficulties in comparing unemployment figures is to identify exactly what an unemployed person is. Wives who work as vacation-time help, or fill in during the Christmas rush get on the record, but they may have no intention of seeking work at other times. On the other hand there may be many unemployed youths in the province who are not registered because they are travelling during their holidays.

But a more significant division may lie in deciding who are persons temporarily out of work who are seeking employment, and those who, although not of pensionable age, may be permanently unemployed because of the growing effects of automation and other phenomena on the economy.

For the first time in history man is faced with a whole new concept of labor. Quite apart from the question of whether or not a man can find a job, even when he is highly trained, is the new proposition that a lifetime of work may not be the career to strive for. The leisured class, once confined to the rich, may find a twentieth-century counterpart at a much lower economic level where people are content to live on a subsistence basis in a more-or-less pioneer environment.

That approach poses problems, of course. Most non-workers must depend on productive workers, at least to some extent, to provide the national income on which all may live. How great a proportion of non-workers can a society support on a permanent basis without the whole structure toppling?

Much of the make-work efforts of governments at all levels is of a non-productive nature. Tidying up the environment has its rightful place, but if some of the large sums now going into temporary financial props were to be expended on setting up facilities for permanent production and markets for consumption, the economy would be farther ahead. Although fewer jobs might be provided at first, since more preparation and capital investment would be required, there would be more producing members of society to carry those who were still without work.

The problems, of course, are many. There would be objections to governmental intervention in manufacturing and other enterprises, there would be objections by unions if some wages fell below the top levels now demanded, there would be obstacles of custom and procedure to overcome. But many of these might be avoided by government working through private enterprise.

The point is that the economic situations which we have known in the past may never be seen again in quite the same form. Global corporations, vast trading blocs, looming shortages in basic materials and energy, public concern about pollution, the burgeoning population — all these factors are new and present unprecedented problems. Just as we are told that Second World War weapons and tactics would be of no use in a new war, so the economic theories and practices of a generation or two ago can not be applicable to the new world we now face. We are groping for answers, and we had better find some soon.

Preserve the Oasis

The plan for eventual elimination of all automobile traffic in Beacon Hill Park — except along Dallas Road — may prove inconvenient to many persons who use park roadways to get from the James Bay district to Fairfield. But the great increase in traffic in recent years — and the clear prospect that it will become still heavier — indicate that the proposed ban may be necessary to save the park itself from automation. Most of the summer traffic consists of sightseers.

The great asset of Beacon Hill Park is the sanctuary it provides, almost at the edge of the downtown area, for persons who wish to stroll or sit and enjoy the serenity of gardens, oak trees, ponds and the Juan de Fuca view. A heavy traffic of cars, and the spreading growth of parking lots, must inevitably destroy this major attraction of the park.

At the risk of inconvenience for some persons a complete closure of the roads may be required. Park officials suggest that traffic controls be imposed in experimental stages — and some have already been implemented. A gradual approach may be the best method, but the final objective seems clear. Sir James Douglas' great gift to Victoria has become a refuge from the grind of the machine age. Few residents or visitors will deny that its true destiny is to remain just that.

". . . apparently they can't borrow it any longer . . ."

MAURICE WESTERN

Not Exactly 'Rep by Pop'

OTTAWA — The House of Commons, as a popular chamber, is supposed to be a mirror of the country as it was on election night.

It is a peculiar rear-view mirror which reflects only a distant image, and that in a much distorted form.

As an example of "Rep by Pop," the present house is the best we have had for some time. Even so, it is demonstrably bad and its successor will almost certainly be worse. The best remaining chance for Rep by Pop under existing law would appear to depend on war, invasion or large scale insurrection — eventualities which do not seem to loom at all formidably in the calculations of the political parties.

The electoral reforms of the Pearson era were based on the persuasive proposition that redistribution is a matter much too important to be left to politicians. They were effected in 1963 and 1964. As a result, we had the opportunity in 1968 to return our first reformed Parliament which reflected the Canada of the 1961 decennial census. This is the Canada which will also be reflected in the 29th Parliament, whether Mr. Trudeau decides on a June election or postpones the vote until fall.

Slip Back

Matters were worse earlier in the 1960s. We had three general elections, in 1962, in 1963, and in 1965, on the basis of constituencies delineated, more or less, with the population pattern of Canada 1951 in mind. But Parliament having become a bit more contemporary in 1968, is now about to slip back four years.

Even if there had been a redistribution on the basis of the 1971 census, Parliament would be an imperfect mirror. The distortion is in part deliberate and calculated. For example, the representation commissioner must take into account rules designed to protect the weaker provinces. None may be accorded fewer members than it has senators. Thus, Prince Edward Island is entitled to four although it has fewer voters than a number of single constituencies in metropolitan Canada. There is also a provision ensuring that no province may be deprived at any time of more than 15 per cent of its members in the House of Commons.

In addition, rural areas are protected by a tolerance provision. Some constituencies are more equal than others because Parliament provided for a permissible variation of 25 per cent in voting populations.

But many of the distortions are natural growth. Representation was linked along ago with the decennial census and this remains the language of the law. In the course of a decade, population grows but not evenly. Mobility is a characteristic of people in modern society and the '60s were notable for a large shift from the countryside and small centres to the booming metropolitan areas. It was, in fact, quite clear in 1968 that the maps were out of date because the five-year census, which is limited and not used for determining representation, already showed very large increments to the populations of a number of big city constituencies in the 1961-66 period. They are even farther removed from the realities of 1972.

PARLIAMENT
. . . an imperfect mirror

The basic problem is that the Parliament and Statistics Canada have been operating on different timetables.

It is distinctly possible that, by the time we are into an election on the basis of the old constituencies, the representation commissioner will already be involved in the process (now virtually automatic and independent of Parliament) of drawing up the maps foreshadowed by the 1971 census returns.

This might appear, at first glance, an argument for deferring an election until 1973. As Mr. Trudeau has frequently observed, there is no legal requirment for a vote this year. But even if the prime minister was prepared to dispense with his right to call an election at a time of his own choosing (which is what deferment would mean in reality), there is an almost insuperable obstacle in the existing legislation.

The procedure which must be followed is set out in the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act. It is set in motion by a certified return, setting out the population of Canada, of the several provinces and of the electoral districts, forwarded by the dominion statistician to the representation commissioner and to the secretary of state.

The commissioner, having calculated the number of members to be assigned to each province, causes a statement to be published "with all reasonable despatch" in the Canada Gazette.

There is an obligation on the governor-in-council, within 60 days after the return is received, to issue a proclamation publishing the names of the boundaries commissioners (whom the government does not appoint). Each provincial commission then has a year to complete its work. Further periods are specified in which members of the house may enter written objections, motions may be debated, and the recommendations scrutinized by the commissions.

Time Lag

On the last occasion, the representation commissioner published his statement in the Canada Gazette on November 28, 1964. The work was not completed until June 16, 1966 when the governor-in-council by proclamation declared the commissioner's draft representation order to be effective on dissolution of the existing Parliament.

In other words, it required almost 19 months (which seems an inordinate time) to revise the political map of Canada. Mr. Pearson was much criticized in 1965 because he did not wait for redistribution. But Mr. Trudeau's position is quite different. He does not have 19 months and he might well require more than that since the process of effecting redistribution has as yet not even begun. Thus, the prospect is that we shall elect, either sooner or later as the prime minister decides, a Parliament for the first half of the '70s based on the Canadian map as it was at the beginning of the '60s.

It is even possible, if the voting fails to produce a majority, that we could have more than one election on the old basis, despite the fact that the dominion statistician already has or soon will have reasonably accurate population returns on the Canada of last year.

One day we may have a more contemporary Parliament, either by sheer luck, some appalling disaster, or by design if the parties can devise a more efficient method than we now enjoy. As experience is about to show, there is much room for improvement.

GARY CLARKSON

Lifelines to the West Coast

Victoria was home port for the CPR steamer Princess Maquinna, a ship called "Old Faithful" by those who had reason to be grateful for her regular run up the West Coast of the Island. Residents and visitors regularly took passage on her, perhaps up to 30 being booked for the trip between here and Port Alice.

The Maquinna was loaded with groceries and supplies for canneries, logging camps, mines and small settlements — 26 northbound stops in all. After unloading the passengers and some of her crew in Victoria she then "deadheaded" to Vancouver or Seattle with her cargo of canned salmon, pulp, ore concentrates and other local products. These events are vividly recounted in Major George Nicholson's "Vancouver Island's West Coast."

Northland Navigation Co. and Nootka Sound Services took up where the Maquinna left off. On its swing southward from the northern mainland, Northland's Skeena Prince touches twelve West Coast settlements, from Malksope to Ahousat, then steams south around Victoria and back to Vancouver. Nootka Sound operates the Uchuck III out of Gold River to a number of logging camps and small communities like Tahsis, Esperanza and Zeballos. Nootka carries the necessities of life to the outposts — food, parts, cars, etc. Says Esson Young, president of Nootka: "You name it, we bring it."

Chief Industries

Logging, fishing and mineral extraction continue to be the chief primary industries of the West Coast. In settlements where the amenities of city life do not exist they have to be brought in. Until recently that meant almost exclusively transportation by water.

The Tahsis Co-Op is dependent on the shipping services to bring in the $1 million in goods which the store sells annually. According to the general manager of the store, the Vancouver price is the base price to which freight charges are added. A 25-pound bag of flour selling for $1.69 in Vancouver gets a markup of 50c at Tahsis.

The federal subsidy to Northland's West Coast run is $130,000 annually; Nootka's is $48,000. Northland states flatly that "without payment of an operating subsidy, it is economically impossible to continue to provide a service . . ." A Nootka Sound Services spokesman says a subsidy may not be required in the future.

Federal plans to cancel the subsidies to the two companies serving the West Coast were announced last December. The Canadian Transport Commission was apparently under the impression that there were adequate road services. However, representations to federal Transport Minister Jamieson, from Mr. Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni), were among efforts that led to extension of the cancellation date to June 30, 1972.

A letter from Mr. Jamieson to provincial Highways Minister Black dated last Feb. 29, said that "the Canadian Transport Commission is well aware of the problems related to the road connection between Gold River and Tahsis and is also aware that development not only of this but of the other roads cannot be expected to provide transport connection to all coastal communities and that some water links between, or extensions of, local roads will continue to be necessary."

Further, Mr. Jamieson made reference to an investigation of possible improvements in communications to the West Coast communities. He notes: "I am informed that no particular problems are anticipated and that the design of a system to accomplish the purpose will be completed in the near future." Dr. Howard McDiarmid, Social Credit MLA for Alberni, thinks that as a result of this letter the extension of the subsidy must follow as a practical matter. A more cautious interpretation is contained in the view of a source at the Canadian Transport Commission who thinks that small independent marine shippers will be able to handle the situation at the end of June, presumably without the subsidies. A CTC announcement of April 7 gives support to the latter solution and indicates "new arrangements" are being negotiated.

Public Hearing Sought

Mr. Barnett has been introducing amending bills in the Commons for some time in an effort to force the water transport committee of the CTC to hold public hearings in the manner of the railway committee. As he put it last December: "The people of the Pacific coast dependent on water transport have continued to be left at the mercy of what operating firms conceive to be an economic opportunity for themselves, or to the good graces of what the water transport committee or the provincial authorities decided in private were necessary subsidies."

The legal status of the ferry subsidies is obscure. The federal government has traditionally, rather than constitutionally, paid subsidies to some of the ferry services in B.C. The provincial government is also not a stranger to the ferry business. Besides the ferry fleet, there is a B.C. subsidy to Alberni Marine Transportation of $1800 monthly.

Although the practical matter of extending the subsidy is still in the air, the possible termination of service by at least one of the major carriers has drawn attention to the complex business of subsidies. An airing of the whole subsidy problem is due. The books of the companies should, at least in part, be introduced into the public record. The taxpayer is entitled to know where his money is going and why. A quasi-judicial body like the water transport committee of the CTC is not sufficiently accountable.

Ideally, what should emerge from all the manoeuvring is a co-ordinated program of transportation to the West Coast, and a basic review of the subsidy system.

FROM OUR READERS

Brotherly Feeling

It was very interesting during the recent troubles over the Hockey Telecasts to see so-called staunch trade-unionists in their true colours.

Every one of them that I ever ran into was grumbling and complaining, and breathing all sorts of oaths, but most of all calling on the government or somebody to do something about it. Most of all, however, many of them were saying that either such strikes should not be allowed, or they should be made to work on such occasions.

It is really fantastic to see such brotherly feeling towards fellow unionists, who are trying to get what they consider to be a fair shake.

These people don't care how much they inconvenience the public when it suits their purpose, but let someone do it to them, and that is a horse of a different color.

Parking

A constant source of irritation at the Hillside-Shelbourne shopping centre is the selfish attitude of many motorists who persist in parking along the curb in front of the stores facing Hillside Avenue.

The pavement fronting these stores is marked with yellow lines and huge "No Parking" signs yet nearly always irresponsible people are parked there making it extremely difficult to ensure a free flow of traffic in and out of both ends of the parking lot.

Seldom does one see a teen-ager defying the parking ban, it is always the mature people — the smug, selfish drivers who care nothing about the inconvenience of others and who are too lazy to walk a few feet from a regular parking stall.

Sometimes the driver sits behind the wheel while his wife is in the store shopping, consoling himself with the idiotic thought that he is not parking as long as he sits behind the wheel, although he is contributing to the traffic difficulties just the same.

Why does the management of this complex allow these people to defy the "no parking" signs?

Are they afraid they may lose a little business if they enforced them? This type of person with their selfish attitude cannot be offended anyway. The only way to educate them to the fact that the world is not just for them alone, is to slap a parking ticket on their car and it should be a good stiff penalty. — Edward M. Doyle, 2549 Shakespeare.

Officials of the Industrial Workers of the World denied to a Times representative this morning that they were instrumental in calling the Mineral Rubber men off their work yesterday morning. Yet the condition cannot be removed from the minds of officials of the company, and the public generally, that the influence of the organization, which has its headquarters in Oriental Alley, has been all-powerful with the strong foreign element on the street work in the present strike.

A Smell Of Poison In the Air

By T.R.B.
The New Republic

WASHINGTON — You can feel it in the air, the disillusionment, the alienation, the cynicism. Things in government aren't going right; worse, there's a growing feeling that you can't do anything about it. It's like groping in the dark for a light switch that may not be there. For the first time the U.S. frustration begins to embrace the very system itself.

Take Vietnam: the public wants out; we can't get out. We want a fair shake on taxes; we know we aren't getting it. We want better distribution of income; the gap isn't closing. We want Congress to control corporate wealth; instead, the corporations pay the congressman's bills. Everywhere in the dark we stumble into things; the economy — inflation is bad enough, unemployment is bad enough, but to get them together!

The taxi driver's wife tells him she needs more money. Why? You should see the price of vegetables and ground beef. But what's this? The headline says Agriculture Secretary Butz "hails higher meat prices." He says "they provide the best way to insure a good supply of the better cuts of beef that I prefer."

The public looks at Washington in disbelief. The ITT thing, for God's sake. The huge concern shreds the documents of its lobbyist and then looks as innocent as Little Eva ascending into heaven. Its president's salary is three times Mr. Nixon's. It runs its own foreign policy with the aid of the CIA; it financed political conventions. So what? It does no more than other multi-billion, multinational, corporations. Nothing criminal, you understand; you can't indict a smell.

Professors have been telling us about giant corporations for years, but till now few have listened. In 1950 the 100 largest corporations controlled 38 per cent of total industrial assets in America; by 1965 it was 45 per cent. Today? Who knows. Seven big companies got 17 per cent of all corporate profits in 1956 — GM, Ford, ATand T, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Texaco, Gulf Oil and IBM. Ten years later the same seven got a quarter of all profits.

Three of the biggest concerns are oil companies. The oil industry has holes in the tax laws you can drive a tanker-truck through — depletion allowance, drilling allowance, the import quota (tariff) system. The normal big oil company pays a lower tax rate than a charwoman.

People are getting fed up. That's why they voted for George Wallace. Not because of his stand on busing alone (though most competent demagogues have a sideline of bigotry). But because Wallace is vocalizing a dozen festering grievances.

Here's an illustration: a $200,000-a-year family now gets a subsidy of about $70 for every $100 of its mortgage payments; a $10,000-a-year family gets an average of $19. We run a kind of welfare system for the affluent.

The Proxmire Joint Economic Committee has just estimated that about $63 billion in federal subsidies are paid every year. Some are good, some are bad. In general the payments tilt in favor of the affluent.

Why doesn't Congress equalize things? — not easy with Russell Long, senator for oil, or James Eastland, senator for farm subsidies, standing in the way. Congress is pockmarked with road blocks. We lack disciplined political parties in the Canadian or European sense.

Every poll shows that the average man wants Vietnam stopped. But bombs keep falling. Can the individual do anything? Apparently not. Leaders tell us not to worry, combat soldiers are coming back home. Isn't that fine? The bombs have a nice technical name, "protective reaction"; they are used only when the enemy has the arrogance to track our fliers over their territory.

Our government is busy with other important matters. For example, it is ferreting out conspiracy and just at present has a couple of informers to illustrate how efficiently it works. Robert Hardy says the FBI employed him not only as informer but as agent provocateur and encouraged him to perform a criminal act in helping to organize conspirators at Camden, New Jersey, to raid the draft board file.

The FBI also has a paid stool pigeon in the Harrisburg case against Father Philip Berrigan and a couple of nuns, who were plotting to kidnap Henry Kissinger. Don't laugh! What with the ITT spectacle and the FBI the funny things are getting to be the most serious. There should be more of them, too, when Edgar Hoover gets his huge new home built on Pennsylvania Avenue right across from its parent, the justice department. The FBI building will be bigger than Justice.

Half a dozen books we have read lately take a rather grim view of all this: The Party's

WALLACE

BUTZ
. . . foot-in-mouth

Over by top-notch political writer David Broder; A Populist Manifesto, a splendid summary by Newfield and Greenfield; America, Inc., Mintz and Cohen; Uncommon Sense, by historian J. M. Burns; Money in Politics, Herbert Alexander. They all discern the disturbance and rising resentment. There is an undercurrent of fear. The public is angry, they say, and keeps asking questions.

Why is infant mortality so outrageously high in America when doctors have an average income of $40,500? Why does Mr. Nixon offer a $100 billion deficit in three years and not staunch the hemorrhage of lost tax revenues? (Mr. Nixon's happy solution is to reelect him so he can give us a national sales tax; it will have such majestic impartiality that the millionaire and the washerwoman will each pay the same 6 per cent sales tax for a bowl of chili con carne.)

Why is it that half the members of Congress have interests in law firms, banks and TV stations? Why doesn't the gap between rich and poor get smaller?—actually the $10,600 gap between the average income of the top fifth of the public and the bottom fifth in 1949 increased to $19,000 in 1969.

These writers express concern, I think, for the same reason. History tells us that if enough people get angry enough about enough grievances at the same time they will begin striking out and breaking things and they are not very discriminating about what they break. A competent demagogue can lead them almost anywhere.

BUILDINGS BELONG TO ALL OF US

By ROBERT FULFORD
Saturday Night

Demolishing Old Ones An Affront To Ecology

When you protest against the destruction of the old buildings in the city cores, you usually find yourself called a sentimentalist. In a sense this is a fair comment, since most people who do protest are proceeding mainly on sentiment, on feeling. They feel that the loss of the physical remains of the past is an emotional disaster for the people of the present and the people of the future.

They can't prove it, of course, but their emotions tell them that old buildings give our cities a sense of identity. Their emotions also tell them that the cold contemporary architecture of down town Canada makes the cities harder to live in than they need to be, and that retaining as many as possible of the old buildings will offset this effect. They feel that the visual variety of the old buildings, set in among the new, works against that feeling of alienation which is the special curse of the modern city.

In pleading this case, we supporters-of-old-buildings tend to lose out. Architects, developers, planners and politicians just don't see it that way, and probably never will. They think that the best use of the land is the most economically efficient use. In fact, they think this is the only real criterion. So they feel free to tear down anything that stands on a piece of ground that can be put to better (more profitable) use.

If there is a building ten stories high, and if a building thirty stories high can be put on the same space and make money, then by all means tear down the ten-storey building. Destroy all the old office buildings, if necessary, and with them the old city halls, the old railway stations, even the old churches. Push them out of the way. We have something more important to put up.

This argument carries with it the public in most parts of Canada; or, at least, carries that part of the public which influences the decisions of city councils. But there is another argument, based on neither sentiment nor efficiency. It is seldom discussed in this context, but it should be.

I mean the ecological argument. Ecologists proceed on many fronts (air, water, food, etc.) but they devote too little attention to old buildings. They should consider the possibility that destroying a useable old building, even a useable old house, is an affront against the ecology.

Consider that every building contains many tons of irreplaceable materials, taken from the limited store in the ground. Consider that every building contains within it the results of many man-hours of labor. Consider that these together belong to the sum total of material resources and human effort. Consider that today many buildings capable of lasting another generation, or several generations, are being destroyed merely in order to use their land better. Consider the possibility that conspiring in this process is acting irresponsibly.

The English magazine Ecologist recently pointed out that tearing up precious land to make more roads at the same time that railroads are allowed to crumble away unused is criminally wasteful; in the same sense, throwing away buildings amounts to vandalizing mankind's store of useful materials. Of course the man who knocks down the building "owns" it; but he owns it no more, really, than people own the air and water.

Until we understand that what we all possess we possess together, and until we achieve a genuine respect for the things we dig out of the ground and the things we make from them, we will not be much distance along the way toward a sane program for the environment.

Getting the Word in the Soviet Union

By ROBERT G. KAISER
Washington Post

MOSCOW — By western standards, public discussion of political issues in the Soviet Union is conducted in the quietest of hushed tones. An outsider could be forgiven for concluding that there was really no public discussion at all. But there is, and it can be fascinating.

Since the days of Lenin, the Soviet Communist Party has believed in lectures for the public. Local party organizations, educational groups in big cities, factories and workers' clubs all stage lectures by officials who can speak for the regime. Curious audiences often try to get them to answer for the regime, too.

The questions from the audiences at such lectures can be a lively indication of the curiosity about the rest of the world which seems to pervade this society. The questions also reveal the Soviet citizen's healthy sense of humor, and his access to information that is not provided by official Soviet news media.

Met 'Real People'

The other night several hundred Muscovites of all shapes and descriptions gathered in a downtown auditorium to hear two journalists and a professor discuss world affairs and agriculture. The journalists were obviously the main attraction; the professor of agriculture was an unneeded extra.

The first journalist reviewed the international scene, concentrating on Europe and the Middle East. The people of Europe were ready for a new era of peace and detente, he reported — he knew this firsthand from a trip to Paris last fall. "I was able not only to read the newspapers and listen to the radio in those (western) countries," he confided," I was also able to meet real people." And they all favored more security in Europe.

A Few Statistics

The Middle East situation is still serious, nearly five years after "the moment when Israel attacked the Arab lands," he said. His time was up before he had mentioned either President Nixon's trip to China or his forthcoming visit to Russia.

The professor came next, with lines like: "I'm not going to list a lot of statistics; you already know them, so I'll mention only a few . . ." As he reviewed the achievements of Soviet agriculture and the beauties of Soviet farmland, the professor lost his audience. A loud hum of conversation rose in the hall. Toward the end of his talk a lady in a front row said in a loud voice, "enough." The speaker, a happy-looking man with a wrinkled red face, took it all in good humor.

The second journalist had recently returned from a tour of duty in West Germany, the subject of his talk. He was dressed in stylish western clothes, down to the square frames of his eyeglasses. The German federal republic, he said, is a country "at the crossroads," containing both progressive and reactionary forces.

He depicted chancellor Willy Brandt sympathetically, described his self-imposed exile during the Nazi years (not widely known here), and his efforts to reach constructive agreements with the Socialist camp.

No Time for Fun

Life in West Germany is full of "stress," he said — working people were so busy making money that they had no time for any fun. "The pay is high, but they don't get any joy from it," he reported.

He quoted a German who told him that the stores were full of goods but when one visited the home of a relative, his dining room table was always empty. On the other hand, the same German was quoted as saying, when one is received as a guest in Moscow, the table is always piled high. The audience smiled approvingly at that.

Questions for the speakers were written out and passed up to the front of the hall. Each speaker got a pile and sorted them out. The journalists who had reviewed the world scene answered first.

He had received dozens of questions, and he held them like a wad of tickets in the hand of a compulsive bettor at a race track. He summarized those on a similar subject. For instance, he said he had received questions about a mysterious explosion at a factory in Minsk which — contrary to the usual silence on such disasters — was reported, though not explained, in the Soviet press.

"I don't know any more than was in the newspapers," he said.

Did he think Sen. Edward Kennedy would run for president of the United States?

"No."

What progress were the Arabs making with all our (Soviet) help? "I hear (the questioner wrote) they are still illiterate."

"They are making great progress," he replied, noting specifically the development of education in the Arab countries in recent years.

One last question: What could he say about President Nixon's visit to Moscow?

On Front Page

"Everything was published on the front page of Pravda," he replied, referring to a 70-word announcement that Mr. Nixon would arrive here May 22. Loud and general laughter filled the auditorium.

The professor of agriculture may not have captivated the audience with his speech, but he had no shortage of questions to answer.

Why are the vegetables in state stores of worse quality than those in private farmers' markets? The audience laughed. He replied, also grinning, that this was a scientific question to which the party was paying serious attention.

Why are we (the Soviet Union) buying grain from Canada? The professor observed that this question came from an "informed" citizen. (The recent $330 million Soviet contract to buy food grains from Canada has not been mentioned in the Soviet press.)

The answer was that the Soviet Union had to help other Socialist countries which could not grow enough food. Moreover, they sold grain to other countries, like Finland. It was a complicated matter, but in any event, it's not a lot that's bought from Canada.

The former correspondent in Bonn also had numerous questions.

Will West Germany ever pay war-damage reparations to the Soviet Union? No, they had paid to the western powers.

What about cars in Germany? Yes, there are a lot of them. The prices go up 6-7 per cent a year. The cost of a car is not so high, but there are a lot of taxes. In fact, it costs more to run a car than to buy one. "That's the cleverness of modern capitalism."

The Presidents' Palace

By TERRY COLEMAN
Manchester Guardian

WASHINGTON — The building generally known as the White House is the palace where Nixon lives and where all 36 presidents of the United States have lived, except the first, whose name was George Washington.

I should like to offer a few tips to the U.S. on how better to show its national stately home to the 1,500,000 visitors who see round it every year. Americans, being democratic, probably make the unconscious assumption that this is a log house; all houses, after all, being created equal. But it is not a log house. It is, to put it tactlessly, a palace, and the ministry of works in London, or any decrepit duke in the English provinces, could tell the president a thing or two about the proper way to show off palaces.

For a start, the whole place looks disgracefully rich. This is because it is disgracefully rich. Need all the gilding and all the carpeting look new? Need the White House be painted white quite so often? Need all the paint look new?

"Yet this," says Patricia Nixon, in a welcoming letter to visitors, "is no solemn temple where one must tread with reverent step." Yet it is. No Englishman, at any rate, dare tread less than reverently for fear of scuffing the carpet, or the varnish, or the paint.

And of course the prime, great trouble is that all this richness and newness quite deprive the place, or at least those parts of it shown to the public, of any sense of history, of any sense, that is, that the past was real, and that people who are now long dead, but whose life was once as much to them as any man's now living is to him, did live in this house.

This is a shame, because they did of course live here. The history of the place is virtually the history of the United States, and that is plentiful. Being America, the White House was naturally designed by an Irishman, James Hoban, who in 1792 was awarded a prize of $500 for his plans, and a gold medal worth 10 guineas. It does, in fact, much resemble Leinster House, Dublin.

After that, its history is very much that of American democracy. After Jackson's inaugural in 1829 all the world went to the White House reception, stood in muddy boots on satin chairs, and had to be lured out on to the lawns by the offer of punch served from buckets.

And as Jackson was about to leave office in 1837 he was presented with a 1,400-pound cheese, which he invited the public to come and eat in celebration of George Washington's birthday. What they did not eat they dropped on the carpets and trod in.

Van Buren, who succeeded Jackson, had gentler tastes and got in trouble for them. He was said to have spent the people's cash to dine in the manner of European monarchs, to have bought finger cups in which to wash his "soft, white lily fingers," and to have eaten French dishes rather than good American hog and hominy.

TRICIA NIXON
. . . flags for bedsheets?

On this evidence, Van Buren was decadent. He lost the next election. The American spirit triumphed, the public was freely admitted to the White House until 1902 — up from the country, wandering round the rooms, feeling the quality of the curtains — and as late as 1932 Herbert Hoover invited all comers to a New Year reception. But then the custom lapsed. Now the visiting hours are 10 a.m. to noon, Tuesday through Saturday, and the steps of all are reverent all right.

The whole place, in fact, is too far gone in reverence for much to be done, and it is not so much reverence for the idea of democracy as for the office of president. The idea of Jacksonian democracy is long dead. Nobody will ever again have to be lured outside by the promise of buckets of punch. It is strange, in a country where the campaign for presidential office is such a brawl, that this office, when achieved, should be so holily reverenced.

But a little decay works wonders. A few rooms could be allowed to get decently shabby, and even a carpet allowed to fray. In that part of the house the public sees, surely, the athletic young men who all look as if they are in training for the president's bodyguard could be replaced by the American equivalent of the retired naval petty officers who give so much tone to the maritime museum at Greenwich, England. And the more ludicrous pages could surely be removed from the official guidebooks, which are for the most part excellent until they get on to present-day First Families.

What possible use is there for a color photograph of the President's Cabinet in "unprecedented session" on April 15, 1969, with not only Mrs. Nixon but all the cabinet wives in attendance? The women stayed throughout. What for?

Is this an "Alarming upward spiral"?

Source: Department of Education, Public Schools Annual Reports, 1970/71 and earlier; B.C. Government, Financial and Economic Review, 1963 to 1971; and An Economic Review of Resources, Production and Government Finances, 1962 and earlier.

The Social Credit Government has described the relationship of public school costs to Provincial Government revenues as "an alarming upward spiral".

Again, the facts refute what the public is being told about education costs.

Despite an increase in school enrolment of 350,000 students in the last 20 years...three times the growth rate of the rest of the B.C. population...COST INCREASES FOR SCHOOLS HAVE BEEN MODERATE AND CONTROLLED.

That record does not justify the removal of the democratic rights of teachers to engage in full collective bargaining.

That record does not justify controls which will inevitably lead to a deterioration in our public school services.

The public has a right to be informed...accurately...on the real issues, the real facts.

That's why we want to set the record straight.

TRAIN FISH TO MISS NETS?

OTTAWA (CP) — Researchers hope to breed types of salmon that won't swim where they can be caught by Danes, Sir Hugh MacKenzie, director of the Atlantic Salmon Research Trust in England, said Wednesday.

Interviewed during a short trip to Canada, Sir Hugh said the trust and other organizations are attempting to determine why certain salmon strains spawn, migrate and return to their rivers of birth.

Eventually, it may be possible to breed a strain that "won't go to Greenland to be caught by the Danes," the 59-year-old vice-admiral said.

Denmark has been accused of overfishing the anadromous salmon—fish that breed in fresh water before returning to the sea—by taking their catch on the high sea. Canada and Britain have banned high sea salmon fishing and Denmark has agreed to end its catch by 1976.

Sir Hugh, former head of the $1.5-billion Polaris submarine building program in the British defence department and knighted in 1966 for the work, began working for the trust when he retired.

He is in Ottawa to address the annual meeting of the Navy League of Canada—he's chairman of the Navy League in Britain—and will visit the International Atlantic Salmon Foundation in St. Andrews, N.B., during his visit.

The trust, established in 1969 following an international conference of nations that fish the North Atlantic, works on a yearly budget of about $22,000. It relies on individuals and interested groups for money.

Hospital 'Firetrap'

CUMBERLAND (CP) — Cumberland General Hospital is an outmoded firetrap, the British Columbia Hospital Insurance Commission said Wednesday.

The commission has recommended that the hospital be phased out when a 50-bed addition to St. Joseph's Hospital in nearby Comox is completed.

Cumberland Mayor Bill Moncrief, however, said the insurance commission was refusing to authorize the expenditure for necessary repairs to bring the outmoded hospital to a safer state, even after the local hospital board had approved spending the money.

Mr. Moncrief said the insurance commission's stand simply indicates that the commission wants the hospital closed, despite the feelings of the people.

Walkathon To Support 'Village'

A 15-mile walkathon for the Children's International Summer Villages will start at 8:30 a.m. Saturday at the CPR Wharf, Belleville and Oswego.

More than 200 entrants are expected.

The route is along Oswego to Dallas, to Willows Park by way of the waterfront and back to the starting point by the same route.

Greater Victoria will be sending eight children, in two groups, to represent Canada at a "village" in Mississippi this summer. They will also play host in Victoria to children from 10 countries who will attend a village at St. Margaret's School, Saanich.

Names of the eight winners, four boys and four girls, 11 years old, will be announced in late May or early June.

They will be chosen on the basis of personality, character, willingness to help others and ability to make friends.

Children from Belgium, Costa Rica, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Japan, The Netherlands, Sweden and the U.S. will attend the village in Victoria from mid-July to mid-August.

LOFFMARK SAYS NO NEW POLICY FOR HOSPITALS

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark today denied the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service has a new cost-control policy for hospitals.

The minister was responding to statements made Wednesday by New Democratic Party Leader Dave Barrett who said Surrey Memorial Hospital will be laying off up to 30 permanent staff because of BCHIS cost-cutting.

Loffmark said there is no new policy, but BCHIS is in the process of setting rates for hospital operating costs this fiscal year. He said criteria being used in setting the rates are no stricter than in previous years.

Asked if there was any new government policy on hospital costs, Loffmark said: "I know of no such thing."

Loffmark said it is possible for a hospital to operate beyond its budget without being an inefficient operation, but ways must be found to eliminate these deficits in future years.

He would not specifically link laying off staffs as a means of reducing deficits, and he said he did not know whether Surrey Memorial ran at a deficit last year.

A-G Seeks More on Quilt

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said today he is still seeking new information from two sources about the controversial death of Fred Quilt, a Chilcotin Indian who died in Williams Lake last November.

Peterson said he has reviewed the report of a special investigation he ordered into Quilt's death but has asked for further information.

He received the report earlier this week and said last Monday that he would have to study it before deciding whether to act on it. Questioned on his way into a cabinet meeting, the attorney-general said he decided he wanted the investigation carried further.

He also said he has received a report from provincial supervising coroner Glen McDonald who had been ordered earlier this spring to review the initial inquest into Quilt's death.

Peterson said he has asked McDonald for more details on certain aspects of his report. The attorney-general would not elaborate.

But he said he hoped to have both reports completed by the end of this month in the interests of reaching a quick decision on how to proceed.

Indians have alleged that Quilt died because of a beating allegedly given him by RCMP. The inquest said he died of unnatural but accidental causes.

Medal for Service Awarded Wallace

British Columbia's deputy provincial secretary, L. J. Wallace, had been awarded the Order of Canada's medal of service, along with 22 other Canadians.

The service medal is awarded for "excellence in all fields of endeavor in Canadian life." Wallace was active in organizing several centennial celebrations in B.C.

Among 10 prominent Canadians receiving Companions of the Order of Canada were composer Harry Somers and Canadian Pacific chairman N. R. Crump.

Companies are picked for "outstanding merit of the highest degree, especially service to Canada or to humanity at large."

The recipients, announced Wednesday night, were invested by Governor General Roland Michener at Government House, Ottawa.

Woman Bound in Hospital

An 85-year-old woman who died in Queen Victoria General Hospital March 2, three days after being admitted with a nosebleed, was at least part of the time during her stay in hospital physically restrained by binding of her hands or wrists, a coroner's jury was told Wednesday night.

Mrs. Charlotte Muddle, of 3444 Vincent Ave. in Saanich, was admitted to hospital in the early hours of Feb. 28 after a call to her home, by Saanich municipal ambulance.

Mrs. Muddle received three blood transfusions after being admitted, and was closely supervised by hospital staff until the time of her death, testimony indicated.

Three of an anticipated 14 witnesses testified Wednesday night, before coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre.

Mrs. Lydia Guelpa, a nursing supervisor at Queen Victoria Hospital, told the inquest Mrs. Muddle showed no signs of external bleeding when she was observed during Mrs. Guelpa's rounds. Mrs. Guelpa also testified she did not see a doctor attending the woman during her stay.

The inquest was adjourned to Monday evening.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A thief with a long criminal record was sentenced in provincial court Wednesday to six months in prison on a charge of theft involving more than $50.

John Maxin, 47, whose local address was a downtown hotel, pleaded guilty to taking a toolbox full of tools, a tape recorder and portable radio from a car parked on Douglas Street Tuesday. Value of the stolen articles totalled $110.

The accused had a long record of theft and related offences in B.C. and Regina.

A 17-year-old who pleaded guilty to shoplifting bycycle brake linings from The Bay Tuesday was given a suspended sentence and placed on six months' probation.

Kenneth Cooknell, of 405 Wilson, said he had swiped the linings for his 10-speed bicycle. Value of the linings and an incidental item taken from a notions counter was $1.05.

★ ★ ★

Mack Jacob Skobay, 35, of 1425 Fernwood, was fined $250 for driving without valid insurance Tuesday in Oak Bay.

★ ★ ★

Richmond Locke Godfrey, 20, of 3018 Blackwood, was given a suspended sentence and placed on six months' probation on a charge of theft involving less than $50.

Godfrey pleaded guilty to shoplifting sardines, apricots and cigarettes worth a total of $1.09 from Eaton's March 24.

★ ★ ★

Herbert Glenn Dawkins, 45, of no fixed address, was jailed one month for obtaining lodgings by fraud.

Dawkins skipped on a bill for $104.01 at a Gorge Road motel April 2. It was his second conviction on the charge within the past year.

★ ★ ★

Myrna Bell, 25, of 612 Boleskine, was acquitted on a shoplifting charge under which she was accused of stealing a $9.81 sweater from Woolco Jan. 21.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, Peter Arne Brown, 17, of 612 Wilson, was fined $300 and prohibited from driving five months after he was convicted of driving while impaired on Happy Valley Road March 20.

Night Ferry Campaign

Members of the Victoria chamber of Commerce were urged Wednesday to write letters in support of a night ferry sailing between Southern Vancouver Island and the mainland.

Helen Beirnes, president of the chamber, told members at a noon luncheon that their support is needed in the continuing campaign to have a night ferry run established.

She said letters should be sent to the chamber office.

Costly Railray

GRANDE PRAIRIE (CP) — The Alberta Resources Railway would face a $5 million annual deficit even if present tonnage were tripled, Industry Minister Fred Peacock said Monday night.

TIRES

The inside story

BIAS PLY
How it's made:
This conventional type of tire construction has 2, 4 or more overlapping fabric plies that run under the tread and around the tire at an angle from the centre line. The fabric plies can be rayon, nylon or polyester, but all four plies are made of the same fabric. Fabric types are never mixed in bias ply construction.

How it works:
Bias ply tires give you reasonably good strength, control and road handling. Bias construction tires absorb road shocks, and provide a soft quiet ride. Compared with newer construction types, conventional bias tires are more subject to "squirming" under the tread, thereby contributing to greater heat build-up and tire wear.

BELTED
How it's made:
As with conventional bias tires, overlapping fabric plies run under the tread at an angle. But these fabric body plies are then reinforced with two thicker fabric or steel belts that also run around the circumference of the tire under the tread. In belted construction, the fabric body plies can be nylon or polyester, while the belts can be rayon, fibreglass or even steel.

How it works:
Compared to the bias tire, the belted tire is slightly rougher riding at low speeds but the belts lock the tire in a rounder shape, greatly decreasing tire uniroll and heat build-up. Belted tires have much more impact and road hazard resistance, better high speed performance, more traction and stability, and tread wear is decreased significantly.

Some common tire terms explained:
Bead: Rings of strong steel wires, wrapped in rubber and fabric, that fit snugly against both sides of the wheel rim and anchor the tire there.
Cord: Fibre material that goes into making up the ply of a tire. Cords are dipped in latex solution to ensure bonding between plies. Cords used today are Nylon, Polyester and Rayon.
Fillers: Layers of parallel fabric cords tested with latex laminated by rubber, and running across the tire at various angles from bead to bead forming the tire carcass.
Belts: Layers of fabric or wire placed on top of or between the carcass plies under the tread between the shoulders. It stabilizes the tire into a "rounder" round, improving various performance qualities.

Variety Keynotes Music Festival

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Wednesday was a great night for singing in the Victoria Music Festival.

In piano and speech arts centres sessions were fairly brief, but at First United Fellowship Hall, the vocal session was a big one and could scarcely have been more varied.

High marks — the highest in the festival so far — were collected during the evening and the climax came with the awarding of the traditional Rose Bowl.

The trophy is one of only two pieces of hardware in this festival which concentrates on bursary and scholarship prizes.

Emblematic of the highest level of vocal attainment, it was won in a close four-way competion by baritone Brian Benn, a 21-year-old second year University of Victoria student.

Enrolled in Education with music as his teaching area, Benn, a pupil of Mrs. Ruth Kyle, said he is seriously interested in singing.

"I may be sticking my neck out," said adjudicator Donald Francke, "but I predict that this young man could have a fine professional career if he wants to work at it. Be good to your voice and your voice will be good to you."

His win also makes Benn a candidate for the provincial senior vocal championship in a festival to be held in Vancouver in May.

The three other Rose Bowl finalists were soprano Ginny Kidd, soprano Joyce Atchison of Duncan and tenor James Oakman.

Debra won the B.C. Registered Music Teachers award for highest aggregate marks in her age category of 16 and under.

Surrounding the two solo singing finals there were choirs of all descriptions — the youthful Victoria Conservatory of Music Studio Choir, the Hampton Singers in the "average age 65 or over" class, the Village Squires barbershop ensemble, Emmanuel Baptist Church choir, the Connectors (a modern group with percussion accompaniment) and that most traditional ensemble, the Arion Male Voice Choir.

And then there was the Patterson family — Pat, Ann, Bill and Sue — whose delightful unaccompanied ensemble singing brought them high praise and a couple of 91s for their two pieces.

In making awards and declaring winners, Francke stresses continually that the joy of doing, the sharing of the pleasure of music is what it's all about.

"I see the festival, not as a first-of-all, but a feast-for-all," he sums up.

Bridge Building Fails Across Sensibility Gap

OTTAWA (CP) — Lloyd Jones wants to do something to narrow the international sensibility gap, but so far his efforts have left him discouraged and disgusted.

The international sensibility gap is most easily defined by example:

If a television viewer in Thunder Bay, Ont., sees a film of people suffering in Borneo or India it is likely to have less impact on him than if those people were from Canada or the United States.

Many people think the gap between Canada and the underdeveloped world is widening as Canada turns more and more inward too its own problems.

Mr. Jones, who spent five years in Malaysia with the Canadian International Development Agency and the United Methodist Church, thinks so.

His answer—at least for the people of Northern Ontario—is the establishment of a centre for international education at Thunder Bay.

Under his plans, the centre would:

Educate the public with speakers, films, workshops and magazines; encourage study travel programs overseas; help students from overseas adjust to Canada;

Promote scholarships and sponsors for students from abroad; assist Canadian students going to study abroad; promote the Thunder Bay area as an international exchange centre and explore new approaches to education with an international basis.

FACILITIES LACKING

Mr. Jones says he returned from Malaysia last August and immediately recognized that while such centres as Ottawa and Toronto have similar facilities, most of the rest of the country does not.

So despite having a wife, four offspring—one adopted child from Malaysia—and three Malaysian students to support at home, he decided to work fulltime promoting his scheme.

He estimated he needs $45,000 to get the project started.

After more than seven months of work, he has $1,000 — donated by an American — and is personally broke because he hasn't received a salary since he came back.

The key, he thinks, is to get federal financial support.

But three days here hounding his MP—Consumer Affairs Minister Robert Andras —and officials at CIDA, Canada's external aid agency, have produced little for him.

Mr. Jones says he is afraid people are going to start thinking of him as a quack because of his persistence.

He has a bachelor of arts degree, a master of arts in educational counselling, holds elementary and secondary school teaching certificates, and was principal of a secondary school in Malaysia.

In general, he says, the people of Northern Ontario are conservative and inward-looking.

"But their kids aren't. The kids need contact with the outside world."

BETHUNE SHRINES

MONTREAL (CP) — A national campaign has been launched to establish two memorials to the late Dr. Norman Bethune, a chest surgeon who won world-wide fame for his work in Spain and China in the 1930s.

Hazen Sise, campaign chairman, told a news conference Wednesday contributions will go toward building a shrine in Gravenhurst, Ont., where Dr. Bethune was born, and a museum in Montreal where he worked for 11 years.

Besides private donations and a hoped-for contribution from the federal government, the group plans to discuss the possibility of a mutual project with the Chinese who remember Dr. Bethune for his help during the Japanese invasion in 1938.

Dr. Bethune died in China in 1939 after contracting blood poisoning at a front-line operating table.

"It is embarrassing to see that visitors from China, such as the table-tennis team, should find nothing but a small plaque on the house where Bethune was born," Mr. Sise said.

VSE Seen As Alberta Exchange

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thomas Dohm, president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange, said Wednesday he hopes to have the VSE recognized in Alberta as the stock exchange for that province.

The Vancouver exchange now processes the Calgary Stock Exchange trading in its computer and publishes the Calgary quotations in its daily bulletin.

Dohm said in an interview he had recently discussed the matter with Harry Rose, chairman of the Alberta Securities Commission, and that Rose favored the idea.

Can. Life

Canada Life reports the value of total business in force reached $11.069 billion at the end of 1971, compared with $10.001 billion in 1970.

The value of new life insurance and annuities sold during the year was $1.228 billion, up from 1.010 billion a year earlier.

Net income from premiums was $142.88 million, compared with $133.91 million in 1970.

Sales in the first three months this year totalled $25 million compared to sales of $16.78 million in the first quarter of 1971.

The company said the increase in sales was the result of improved volume of kraft pulp and lumber but that lower sale prices for kraft pulp were the main reason for lower earnings.

Colcel

Columbia Cellulose Co. Ltd. reports net loss in the first quarter of $4.2 million compared with a loss in the first quarter of 1971 of $1.6 million after a tax credit of $1.35 million. The 1972 loss figure did not reflect an income tax benefit.

In 1971, Colcel had a loss of $17 million.

Indal

Indal Canada Ltd. has negotiated to purchase 80 per cent of the share capital of Fairmont Plating (Alta.) Ltd., of Edmonton, with distributors in western Canada and Fargo, N.D.

The Weston-based company is engaged mainly in construction-oriented metal fabrication. The acquisition is part of western expansion, to include a bid for a substantial part of the mid-western and Pacific northwestern U.S. bumper recyling market.

Labrador

A change of accounting procedure is reflected in the 1971 statement of Labrador Mining and Exploration Co. Ltd., which has included in income its share of earnings of Iron Ore Co. of Canada instead of dividends received from Iron Ore.

Net earnings amounted to $9.46 million compared with just over $9 million, or $2.87 vs. $2.78 a share. On a restated basis, 1971 earnings decreased by $56,348 and 1970 earnings increased by $356,528.

Iron Ore production will increase substantially this year, doubling at Labrador City and adding a new source at Sept. Isles.

MB-Flintkote

Directors of the two companies will decide soon whether to approve a cash offer of more than $30 million made by MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., to buy the paper packaging operations of Flintkote Co., of White Plains, N.Y.

If the vote is favorable, it was expected the deal could be consummated by the middle of 1972.

Purchase would give MB its first operating plant in California, the western packaging division of Flintkote, which also has nine plants, chiefly in the mid-western U.S. under the name of Hankins Container Division, also included in the deal.

Selkirk

Selkirk Holdings Ltd. is working closely with British interests to prepare applications for private radio broadcasting licences in the U.K.

Selkirk Communications Ltd. has been formed to give the company an operating base in Britain.

The Edmonton-based company, with radio-TV broadcasting interests and varied interests in three cable TV operations in four provinces, also looks to further development of each operating segment in this country.

Last year Selkirk had revenue of $11.3 million ($5.8 million), of which TV accounted for the greater part, and net income of $2 million ($1.18 million) or 99.47 cents vs. 78.5 cents a share.

Moneco

Net income from operations rose 53 per cent from $711,000 to $1 million-plus during the year ended with December, reports Moneco Ltd., the new name for Montreal Engineering.

Revenue went up 9 per cent from $17 million to $18.5 million, compared with an 11 per cent increase in 1970.

Share earnings were equal to 75 cents against 49 cents a year earlier.

Retained earnings amounted to $4.29 million at year end compared with $3.63 million, and cash flow rose from $683,000 to $1.18 million.

CSA After Pre-Fabs

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Standards Association, long known for its electrical appliances testing, has moved into the area of mobile and factory - built homes.

Constance Mungall of Toronto, an editor of the association's publication, made the announcement Wednesday.

"Factory - built homes will be better constructed than those individually built because of the CSA inspection right in the factory," she said later in an interview.

CSA standards and testing procedures were developed by the association in conjunction with the Canadian Home Manufacturers' Association and the Canadian Building Officials' Association.

Mrs. Mungall estimated that 26 per cent of home building in Canada now is done in factories and this will increase to 40 per cent by 1980.

Ninety per cent of mobile homes bought in Canada will be CSA certified, she said. The 10 per cent that aren't will be United States imports or those that people have built themselves.

Shortage of Energy Becoming Bigger Threat than Pollution

OTTAWA (CP) — The president of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy attacked Wednesday what he called unjustified anti-pollution regulation and suggested that people give more attention to the threatened shortage in energy resources.

T. H. Paching, head of the University of Alberta's mining and engineering department in Edmonton, was reporting to the institute's annual meeting on the last day of his term as president.

He also suggested that, in view of dwindling resources, such practices as strip mining might be used. Strip mining has been attacked, particularly in the United States, by groups that objected to the visual and ecological effects of digging huge holes to get minerals.

Patching said "some people" have become alarmed at the threat of pollution, and as a result many activities of the mining industry have been restricted.

"In some instances, standards are being set which have no physical or economic justification and which will increase costs for consumers and may decrease employment."

He added that measures "to increase the quality of life" could mean creation of a lower standard of living.

"During all of the discussion of environment and pollution standards in recent years, there has not been as much attention to the possibility that, instead of our way of life being jeopardized by pollution, it may some day be jeopardized by shortages of necessary materials and more especially by a lack of suitable sources of energy to sustain it.

"There is no immediate lack of any important minerals or fuels at the present time, and so there appears to be little urgency to do much now to assure future supplies. And yet the writing is on the wall that unless care is taken we will have shortages in several important sectors in the foreseeable future."

Discoveries of crude oil and natural gas are not keeping pace with the growing demand for these fuels, he said.

"It is rather sobering to realize that when our grandchildren are as old as we are most of the world's crude oil and natural gas will be gone."

U.S. BROWNOUTS PREDICTED

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Interior Rogers Morton said Wednesday some areas of the U.S. may experience power failure "brownouts" this summer, but he hoped the problem would not be a widespread or serious one.

Rogers discussed the electric power problem as he sought to emphasize that the nation must pay as much attention to developing and adequate power supply as it does to protecting the environment.

"There may be brownouts in some areas this summer," he told a press conference, "but I hope we get through the summer in a satisfactory manner, even though by a narrow margin.

"We haven't run out of gas yet," he said in an analogy to an auto driver, "but the gauge is below half full and we don't know where the next gas station is."

Morton urged consumers to develop an awareness of the nation's energy needs, and to understand that "arbitrary and capricious" actions by environmentalists can deprive the nation of the energy it needs to meet all its needs, including environmental ones.

He cited the lawsuit blocking offshore oil drilling in the Gulf of Mexico and the law suit blocking the proposed Alaska oil pipeline as "arbitrary actions" taken before all facts had been gathered and studied.

Questioned what consumers should do to contribute to his proposed "energy ethic," he said consumers should demand better insulation of homes and more efficient heating systems.

Asked whether the Nixon administration should emulate its predecessor and set an example by turning off the white house lights, Morton replied laughingly: "they are the lights of the people and should be kept on. However, maybe we can make those lights more efficient by getting more candlepower per kilowat."

Morton said his department is still studying the feasibility of the Alaskan pipeline and has not ruled out bringing the Alaskan oil southward via a Canadian route.

Benson Sees Job Growth

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP) — "Unemployment sure as hell will never be solved but the unemployment trend is going downward," Defence Minister Edgar Benson said Wednesday.

"There are tremendous new jobs being created but the labor supply is growing quickly," the former finance minister told a service club. Benson was succeeded as finance minister earlier this year by John Turner.

Benson said the introduction of tax reform in Canada was necessary and will be beneficial to most Canadians.

"We will have a never-ending debate on taxation . . . None of us likes to be taxed but there is a need to change the method of levying taxes."

He said price and wage controls are "at best a crutch" and not a cure-all in slowing down increases in those areas.

Sanction Breach Admitted

NEW YORK (AP) — For the first time, the United States has charged American citizens with violating a United Nations resolution which the U.S. attorney's office said had become part of the law of the land.

They were accused of circumventing a 1968 UN resolution imposing economic sanctions on the white-ruled African state of Rhodesia which was embodied in United States law by an executive order establishing export and import controls.

Last November, Congress relaxed the restrictions to permit the import of Rhodesian chrome and other strategic materials if they were otherwise only available from a Communist country.

Several shipments of chrome ore have been received under special licence since then by such firms as Foot Metals and Union Carbide.

The four individuals and two corporations charged all pleaded guilty Wednesday to some parts of the 18-count indictment.

One of the men was Edward H. Bartlett, Vermont tax commissioner, charged in a separate information. He pleaded guilty to conspiring with others from 1968 to 1970 to form a corporation in Vaduz, Liechtenstein, to hide trading with Rhodesia; opening a bank account in Zurich to finance the deals; entering into a secret agreement with the government of Rhodesia and Sable Chemical Industries of Rhodesia to supply ammonia and funnelling the payments through Switzerland and Liechtenstein to New York and Yazoo City, Miss.

Margas Shipping Co. of Panama pleaded guilty through a lawyer to all 18 counts of a grand jury indictment charging conspiracy to violate the export controls and the actual exporting of ammonia without a licence, as well as false statements.

Judge Charles L. Brient set sentencing for June 16.

UVic to Study Teaching Value

The University of Victoria senate decided Wednesday night to establish a permanent committee to study teaching effectiveness at the university.

The move came after a report was submitted to senate from the faculty of education, recommending several methods of evaluating teaching effectiveness on a faculty-wide basis, including greater involvement of students.

The committee, composition of which will be decided at a later date, will consider the recommendations of the president's advisory commission on academic planning and will report to senate with proposals for action as soon as possible.

Members of senate expressed concern that not enough attention is being given to the evaluation and improving of teaching effectiveness at UVic. Students will likely be included on the committee to be established.

FUND HALF-WAY TO GOAL

More than half the $100,000 target has been raised in the 1972 Conquer Cancer Campaign, says an organizer of the fund-raising effort.

Wilf Burton, executive officer of the Canadian Cancer Society's Vancouver Island branch, said the campaign has an excellent chance of reaching the target.

Burton said the campaign started April 1 and will continue through the month.

"In the first week we have had a tremendous response to our residential mail drop," he said.

"Just over one half of the $100,000 target has been realized to date," he said, "and we still have roughly 80 per cent of the Greater Victoria residents to help us raise the balance."

Over the past 23 years, the Canadian Cancer Society has contributed more than $42 million to research in Canada. More than 50 centres now offer treatment for cancer, including Victoria.

Plot Grows Behind Yablonski Slaying

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Government sources say more major developments are expected in the 1969 murders of United Mine Workers insurgent Joseph (Jock) Yablonski and his wife and daughter.

The disclosure followed Wednesday's arrest on federal conspiracy charges in Lake City, Tenn., of William Jackson Prater, 52, an official of the UMW's District 19 who became the sixth person taken into custody in connection with the killings.

"The conspiracy doesn't end here," one well-informed source said. "It goes much higher," the source said, "and we expect more important developments soon."

Prater was charged with conspiring to interfere with the rights of a union member, conspiring to interfere with an investigation and conspiring to obstruct justice.

REITERATE CLAIM

The indictment detailing the charges reiterated an earlier government claim that Yablonski was killed at least in part to keep him from testifying before a federal grand jury that was investigating UMW activities in Washington, D.C.

The indictment was based largely on a statement given to the FBI earlier this month by Annette Gilly, one of five persons arrested in the slayings earlier, sources said.

The statement was introduced Tuesday when Mrs. Gilly, a 31-year-old Cleveland housewife, pleaded guilty in nearby Washington, Pa., to state murder and conspiracy charges and agreed to turn state's evidence, perhaps against her father, Silous Huddleston.

FRIEND OF PRATER

Like his daughter, Huddleston, 63, faces state charges of murder and conspiracy. He is scheduled to go on trial next week.

Huddleston is a former president of a UMW local in District 19 and has been identified by the government as a friend of Prater.

Yablonski, 59, was slain shortly after he was defeated in a bid for the presidency of the UMW by incumbent W. A. (Tony) Boyle. The victims were found shot to death in their Clarksville home Jan. 5, 1970.

During his campaign, Yablonski charged there was widespread misuse of union money and other improprieties, and he promised reforms.

BOYLE CONVICTED

Boyle was convicted by a federal jury in Washington, D.C., last month of illegally spending union money on political contributions, but he is appealing.

—Claude E. Vealey, 28, of Cleveland, who pleaded guilty and turned state's evidence last June.

—Paul Gilly, 38, Mrs. Gilly's husband, who was convicted of murder and sentenced to death last month.

Building Activity Keeping '71 Pace

Construction activity within the unincorporated areas of southern Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands is remaining steady with last year's pace.

Permits worth $3.36 million were issued in the first three months of this year compared with $3.30 million in the same period last year, figures from the Capital Regional District show.

One-third of the building activity was in Colwood, where permits worth $1.2 million were issued compared with $1.01 million in the first three months of last year.

Langford was second at $1.05 million this year against $1.14 million last year.

There were sharp declines in Metchosin and View Royal. Permits in Metchosin fell to $113,407, from $850,050 and View Royal declined to $23,488 from $195,100. Sooke ($196,809) and Outer Gulf Islands $337,035) remained steady with last year's figures.

Drydock Looming for Minisub

OTTAWA — There's a good and growing chance that Pisces IV, the $2 million Vancouver-built research minisub which was supposed to be sold to Russia, will go unused by government marine scientists this summer.

And a federal environment department official said Tuesday he is "pretty sure" that Russian scientists will be unable to use the submersible this summer, despite official Canadian offers to lease the sub to Russia along with a Canadian pilot this year.

The sale of Pisces IV to Russia was blocked last December by the cabinet for "security reasons." Subsequently, the federal government purchased the sub from International Hydrodynamics Ltd. (Hyco) of Vancouver, the builder of the sophisticated, deep-diving craft. Hyco may end up leasing the minisub back from the government for commercial work this summer.

Dr. Robert Stewart, head of environment's west Pacific region of the marine science branch, said in a telephone interview that Pisces IV is "pretty much bare at the moment." It is good for little more than making observations out of its special viewing porthole, he added.

The sophisticated instrument package needed for any substantial research will not be fully attached to the minisub by Hyco for perhaps as long as a year from now, he indicated. The instrumentation would have been ready by now if the sale to the Russians had gone through, but the "urgency" to install the equipment now that the government has purchased the minisub is "considerably less," he said.

To add to the problems, a suitable mother ship to allow Pisces IV to operate on the open sea and to dive to its lower limit of 6,000 feet has not been located yet on the west coast (where the sub will stay this year).

And there are still "severe problems with Russia" that have to be resolved by cabinet, including the problem of payments made to Hyco before the sale was blocked and the legal aspects of the contract that was cancelled, according to Dr. Stewart.

The general uncertainty surrounding Pisces IV has left government scientists unprepared to make any serious plans to use the sub this summer. Dr. Stewart added that Pisces IV could be put to use with as little as six weeks notice, once the many problems are rectified.

Dr. Stewart said that at present, Pisces IV is being used by Hyco in a survey for B.C. Hydro. And it is likely Hyco will lease Pisces IV for its own use this summer.

PLAYERS EDGE TOWARDS AGREEMENT

NEW YORK (AP) — The continuing melodrama of baseball's stalled season shifted scenes to Chicago today where the 24 major league owners were to consider another proposal designed to end the player strike as it moved into its 13th day.

"We have worked out a new offer and we are closer to a settlement," reported Marvin Miller, executive director of the striking Major League Baseball Players' Association, following two separate meetings Wednesday with John Gaherin, negotiator for the owners.

Miller denied early reports that the strike had been settled but indicated the two sides were edging closer toward an agreement.

Gaherin, on his way to Chicago for the meeting of owners, said the only matter still in contention was the question of paying the players for any games postponed by the strike but made up later in the season.

"Everything else is in place," Gaherin said.

The players were reported to have softened their rigid stand that they be paid their full salaries if they play a full 162-game schedule. One report said that Gaherin was carrying with him a player proposal quite similar to the last offer made by the owners and that the strike could end today.

"I'm very optimistic that it might be settled this week," said Tom Haller, player representative of Detroit Tigers. Haller described Wednesday's meetings between Gaherin and Miller as "an inter-twining of the minds for a soluble solution."

Gaherin was more direct.

"We didn't resolve it," he said.

The issue no longer is the pension question which touched off baseball's first general strike almost two weeks ago. That matter was settled by a compromise $500,000 contribution agreed to by the owners during marathon negotiations Tuesday.

Now, the players are questioning on what basis they will be paid when they go back to work.

"It's a simple proposition," said Gaherin. "We say, if we attempt to make up some or any of the games postponed so far and in so doing we create a situation where an admission will be charged for the games, we'll pay them. But if we bring it in as a single admission doubleheader, we owe them nothing additional."

The owners first argued that the players are paid for 182 days, not 162 games. By that reasoning, pay for the 13 days the players have missed would be eliminated.

The players argue that if they are asked to play the full 162-game schedule, they should be paid for that full schedule.

Complicating the issue is a split between the two leagues on whether the games missed so far should be made up at all. National League owners are believed insisting on playing the full schedule and fitting the postponed games into the season. American League owners are willing to forget the postponed dates and pick up the season in progress.

That was certain to be one of the main subjects for discussion at today's meeting.

Bud Selig, owner of Milwaukee Brewers, said the owners have offered to pay the players one day's pay for each game made up and "a normal day's pay" for a double-header, not two days pay for two games in a single day.

"I believe that both leagues should work on uniformity and will pull for it," said Selig on the question of the schedules.

Selig said he anticipated an excellent chance for a settlement today.

Another factor that might speed an agreement today is the owners' desire not to lose another lucrative weekend with its obvious larger gates and the national television revenue of about $200,000. One such weekend already has been lost and there is no way to make up that lost income.

Reverence for a Star: All Jack Does Is Win

First, it was Arnold Palmer who gave golf its great jump forward in the '60s; then last year it was Lee Trevino who became the most easy to identify with the average fan.

SuperMex suddenly became the new idol of the greens (and TV viewers), and just as quickly Lee's Fleas had picked up the torch that Arnie's Army had dropped before them.

But all this time, even when Palmer was being acclaimed the golfer of the half century (or was it century?), and Trevino was bidding to command that zealous cult of fairway fans Arnie had developed, a fresh face kept popping up in the picture.

Jack Nicklaus kept challenging tradition, even beating Palmer, along with almost everyone else, and nearly all the time, just as he did last week at Augusta in winning his fourth Masters.

It's rather odd that Nicklaus, for all his skills, hasn't captured the fancy of the masses in the Palmer manner. Rather he appears to have been resented for upstaging a popular idol.

Some Un-American Sportsmanship

Even last year in his playoff in the U.S. Open against Trevino, the galleries were openly in favor of Trevino. It was reported at the time that there were cruel cries of "attaboy Jack" when he twice had trouble getting out of traps.

If this is understandable, it's probably because simply he's too good. He is as close to being perfect as it's possible to get; he can hit the ball farther, and straighter, than anyone else; his short game can't be faulted; and even if he does stand for seemingly an extraordinary long time over his putts, there aren't too many who are consistently better on the greens either.

If there is more of a reverence for Nicklaus than sheer adulation, as in the case of Palmer, or Trevino, it follows that it's only human that the average Joe wants to see him beaten. Not all the world loves a winner, and if the champ can be beaten, fine. That's one price of greatness. (Hockey fans in Toronto even boo Bobby Orr!)

Besides, Nicklaus had a prepaid golf education.

This alone hurts his image. The average golfer finds it easier to side with Palmer, or Trevino. If Nicklaus has a classic swing, Palmer and Trevino don't. Palmer lunges at the ball; Trevino has a flat arc. But if both do many things wrong, they also score well. Palmer charms the galleries with his famous charge; Trevino is a master of repartee. He is a ham, but he is not inhibited. Put a TV camera on him, or Palmer, and they come up big. And that's what the galleries love.

Lee Reached Back and Belted One

Besides, Trevino has been a golf hustler all his life, or until he became famous. And if he can psyche his opponent he will. Take last year's playoff with Nicklaus for instance.

Nicklaus won the coin toss and hit first. He slammed out a terrific drive. Trevino then stepped up, reached back, and belted one of his very best. He outdrove Nicklaus. He had won the gallery on the first shot and, as it turned out, perhaps the championship.

But now the question is: Can Nicklaus win the "Grand Slam"? This includes the U.S. Open, the British Open, and the PGA, plus the Masters, which he already has in his bag.

Trevino, of course, could have much to say about that. He has a "slam" of his own to defend, even if it is only a "little slam." He startled the golf world last year with successive wins in the U.S., Canadian, and British Opens.

It could be quite a match-up, especially if it ever gets down to a head-to-head battle between the two of them again, as happened last June at Merion.

Or what was it Trevino told the man from a national magazine when he was asked if he was nervous in his playoff with Nicklaus?

"Tell my fans there wasn't as much pressure as there used to be in Texas when I was playing a $5 match with only $2 in my pocket."

Sure, it's unfair, but that's why Trevino comes across, and Nicklaus doesn't. He identifies. All Nicklaus does is win. More often than anybody.

Near-Perfect Performance

VANCOUVER (CP) — World snooker champion John Spencer of England fell four points short of a perfect game Wednesday night as he defeated North American champion Cliff Thorburn of Vancouver 9-6 in an exhibition series in Vancouver.

Spencer now leads the round 19-11 in games. Their best-of-75-game series continues in Vancouver each day until Sunday.

In addition to his near-perfect game of 143, Spencer also had a game of 103 points. Thorburn's best round for the day was 75 points.

Habs Brim With Optimism As Series Resumes Tonight

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Scotty Bowman of Montreal Canadiens says there is new spirit in his National Hockey League club and he hopes it will carry them further in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

The Canadiens face elimination tonight when they meet New York Rangers at the Forum in the sixth game of the best-of-seven quarter-final series, which the Rangers lead 3-2.

TV coverage on channels 6 and 8 is scheduled to begin at 5 p.m.

"They're talking a lot more," Bowman said Wednesday from the team's retreat in the Laurentians. "Before they sort of wanted to be alone, now there is a spirit of togetherness."

As for the threatened elimination, Bowman says:

"We are only concerned about winning. . . . We can't be peeking around the corner to wonder about a seventh game."

Despite the many ups and downs the Canadiens have had in the series, Bowman has been able to smile over the work of the Jacques Lemaire-Guy Lafleur-Marc Tardif line.

SHOWING ENTHUSIASM

"They're playing enthusiastic hockey," said Bowman.

"All three of them can handle the puck well. Lemaire has always been a good playoff player. And Roger Bedard who knows Tardif well and had him with the Junior Canadiens points out that Tardif always comes through when he's faced with responsibility. That's what's always made him a good man in the playoffs.

"Lafleur? Well I think he's more at ease in his own element. He played well this season with Frank Mahovlich, but I think that when he's with veteran players, he tends to be more conservative.

"Remember this is not the easiest team to play for. Players tend to worry that if they make a mistake, well, somebody else will be sent in to replace them."

Lafleur has one goal and three assists, Tardif two goals and two assists and Lemaire one goal and one assist so far in the series.

If Montreal wins tonight, the seventh game of the series will be played in New York Sunday afternoon. If the Rangers win, they will open a semi-final series against Chicago Black Hawks at Chicago Sunday.

The Rangers have not won a playoff series with the Canadiens in 22 years. The last time New York took a playoff set from Montreal was in 1950 when they beat the Habs 4-1 in a semi-final.

EAGLES UNABLE TO FIND A HOME

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Backers of the Miami Screaming Eagles hockey team will meet today to decide whether to scrap its plans for a World Hockey Association franchise here.

Herb Martin, president of the Eagles, said the team has run into trouble because it cannot find a home.

Construction of Executive Square Garden, which was to have been a showcase of the WHA, is stalled, with no immediate promise of renewed activity. The problem is lack of parking space, which has held up issuance of a building permit.

"You get to the point where you have to face reality," said Martin, "and time's running out on us."

He referred to a mid-October WHA-season building deadline.

"We want to build an arena. We want to have a hockey team in Miami. But we may not be able to produce it this year."

Martin said a $100,000 performance bond is due from each WHA club at a trustees' meeting in Chicago this weekend.

But he said the bond would be "a $100,000 gamble on whether we could overcome our problems with the Dade County building and zoning board."

If the Miami group decides to turn its franchise back to the WHA, Martin said, $324,000 already expended on the project will be lost.

The league would relocate the franchise, he said.

He added that the Screaming Eagles' widely publicized agreement with Toronto Maple Leafs goalkeeper Bernie Parent to play for the team would still be good, as would those of five other players Martin says have signed with the team.

Cents Tame Tigers

CALGARY — Winger Doug Horbul scored with only 14 seconds to play Wednesday night to give Calgary Centennials a 4-3 victory over Medicine Hat Tigers and a berth in the Western Canada Hockey League semifinal playoffs.

Centennials won the best-of-seven quarterfinal series 4-2, with one game tied. They will face Edmonton Oil Kings, who wrapped up their quarter final series against New Westminster Bruins Tuesday night, winning four games to one.

Horbul's goal, watched by 5,931 spectators, came after a scramble around the Medicine Hat net with defenceman Rod Cox protecting the goalmouth. Goalie Jerry Thomas was pulled by Tigers' coach Jack Shupe in the final minute of play.

WALKER EVENS SCORE

Tigers took a 3-2 lead with less than eight minutes remaining but Brian Walker evened the score and paved the way to victory.

Medicine Hat led 2-0 after the first period on goals by Jeff Ablett and Ed Johnstone. Calgary replied with unanswered goals in the second period by John Senkpiel and Mike Clarke.

Tom Lysiak, on a power play, was responsible for the short-lived Medicine Hat lead in the final 20 minutes.

LETHBRIDGE SEEKS HOCKEY FRANCHISE

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Lethbridge has applied for a franchise in the Western Canada Hockey League, a group of city businessmen announced Wednesday.

The group, led by Herb Christie, an auctioneer, said it had been advised by Thomas Fisher of Vancouver, the league's secretary, that the application will be considered by the league governors at a meeting in June.

"We have good reason to believe that Lethbridge would have no difficulty in obtaining a franchise if a new arena seating between 5,000-6,000 people is built and in operation by the fall of 1973," Christie said.

Laver Advances

QUEBEC (CP) — Top-seeded Rod Laver of Australia was one of four players who advanced Wednesday to quarter-final play in men's singles competition at the Quebec international tennis open.

Laver upended Tom Leonard of the United States 6-3, 6-4 to move on in the $50,000 weeklong tournament which concludes Sunday.

Meanwhile, Arthur Ashe of the United States, the No. 5 seed in the tourney, eliminated John Alexander of Australia 6-4, 7-6 to advance past second-round play.

Two other Americans—Charles Pasarell and Marty Riessen—also got by their opponents in the second round of play to advance to the quarter-finals to be staged Friday.

Riessen stopped Mark Cox of England 6-3, 7-6 while Pasarell upended Australian Terry Addison 6-3, 6-1. Riessen is seeded seventh and Pasarell eighth in the event.

Four more second-round singles matches are set for today.

By The Canadian Press

If the players are in the same mood as their coaches, you can look for St. Louis Blues to tie their Stanley Cup quarter-final playoff with Minnesota North Stars in the sixth game at St. Louis tonight.

The North Stars hold a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven series going into tonight's game but Blues coach Al Arbour insists his team will not lose while Minnesota coach Jack Gordon isn't sure about winning even in seven games.

"There's no way the North Stars are going to win it," says Arbour.

"The way this series has gone I'd be only too happy to win in seven games," says Gordon.

In the other remaining National Hockey League quarter final, New York Rangers hold a 3-2 lead over the Canadiens going into Montreal for the sixth game tonight.

DATES DOUBTFUL

If the North Stars win tonight, they would start their semi-final against Boston Bruins Sunday in Boston, but if the quarter-final goes to seven games, the semi-final would start Tuesday in Boston regardless of whether Minnesota or St. Louis wins.

Arbour says he is sure his players can bounce back on home ice just as they did in the third and fourth games.

The North Stars won the first two games at Minnesota and St. Louis came back with two wins in their arena before Minnesota again took the lead with a 4-3 win Tuesday back in Minneapolis.

The seventh game, if necessary, would also back to Minneapolis Saturday night or Sunday.

BLUES HOLD ON

The Blues looked as though they might take the lead Tuesday night but the North Stars came back with two third-period goals and held on for the win.

"They held us with a real good forechecking game," said Arbour. "They had to, because I'm sure if we'd won, we could have wrapped it up Thursday night.

"We should have been out of the first two periods with a two-goal lead or maybe better. We got careless. We started to run around a little bit in our own zone. We made mistakes, and they capitalized on it."

In Boston, meanwhile, the Bruins were recovering from what they had acknowledged as a tough series against Toronto Maple Leafs which ended Tuesday with the Bruins' 3-2 victory in the fifth game.

The Bruins reported that Derek Sanderson had been released from hospital and doctors said his condition was vastly improved.

Sanderson had spent nights in hospital throughout the quarter-final series, undergoing treatment for an intestinal inflammation.

Happy's Basket Stymies Bucks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim McMillan scored a career-high 42 points but it was a basket by Happy Hairston that proved decisive Wednesday night as the Los Angeles Lakers edged the Milwuakee Bucks 135-134 and evened their National Basketball Association Western playoff finals at a game apiece.

Jabbar tallied 40 points and West had 28.

McMillan's two free throws put the Lakers ahead 131-130 with the clock showing 1:01. With 56 seconds left Jon McGlocklin missed and Wilt Chamberlain rebounded for the Lakers, setting up a 20-foot jumper by West and a three-point lead.

Jabbar cut it to one and then Hairston sank his winning layup to the delight of a sellout crowd of 17,505 at the Forum. The Lakers led 72-66 at the half.

Wests Oust Boxers

Wests advance to the semi-finals against Roadrunners. Other second-round matches still to be played in the annual Victoria and District League competition are Vic West and Prospect Lake (two second division teams) and Oak Bay II against Cosmopolitan Royals.

Hunting: A Privilege, Or Right of Canadians?

Is hunting a right or a privilege?

This was the question I had to answer during a panel discussion at the annual convention of the Western Guides and Outfitters Association in Victoria last week. I was asked to speak as a representative of resident sportsmen and my answer was as follows:

Hunting is more than just a right, it is a prerogative — a birthright for every Canadian citizen. We all recognize the struggles of the early western Canadians pioneers and their need to utilize the fish and game on the land for survival. But do we recognize that it was these same pioneers who desired the exotic species? They struggled to stock barren landlocked lakes with trout and transplanted elk, deer, beaver and game bird species to enrich their environment and sport.

Their struggles gave us a heritage, not only of numerous game species, but of attitudes which continue to prevail in our struggles for sound and ethical wildlife management.

They established organizations like Trout Unlimited, the Canadian Wildlife Federation and the B.C. Wildlife Federation.

Today, however, all Canadians do not have the right to hunt throughout Canada. It is only a prerogative if they live within specific provincial political boundaries.

This should not be! It should be the prerogative of all Canadians whether eastern, western or northern to have equal hunting rights to all Canadian game species.

The fact that it is only a privilege for Canadians to hunt in other political regions, providing they have economic ability, has already resulted in the irreplaceable loss of vital wildlife habitat. Few Canadians know the problems of other political regions and fewer yet understand them.

Why should hunting be a heritage and a birthright of all Canadian citizens? Because it provides physical, mental and emotional well-being which we as individuals must have and as a nation we need to survive.

Modern man, wound up in the necessities of survival, naturally seeks an environment in which he can be revitalized. The phenomenal growth in outdoor recreational sports and vehicles is a certain sign that it is the wilderness or semi-wilderness environments that provide the needed outlets.

The modern hunter also seeks this environment, but he requires a purpose to his leisure. He meets the outdoors in a competitive consumptive mode. His reward being fair chase and success. The chase provides the full spectrum of feelings which act as a nectar to his emotions, uninhibited by necessary urban cultural control.

And in the main it is an environment where a father and son can get to know each other.

From the hypersharp senses as the quarry is sighted to the total relaxati n at camofire's end, what is missing from his urban existance is renewed by hunting.

When we speak of relegating hunting to the state of a privilege, it smacks to me of Europeanism. This connotation implies in my mind the lord and his estate.

Who will be the lords? How will one earn this privilege? — with money, through political expediency, or as a member of some elite class?

This Europeanism frightens me for it destroys the attitudes of our pioneers and the uniqueness of Canada. Worse, it implies sport for the privileged few and negates our prerogative as Canadian citizens to the right of hunting.

We talk here of a birthright which is every Canadian's to pursue. However, while we discuss our rights the wildlife, the essence of our sport are being destroyed because they have no rights to the wilderness which is their home.

Like the perennial argument between the sportsman and the protectionalist over the right to kill, or like our discussion over the right to enjoy the sport of hunting, the land which is the vital habitat for wildlife is being irreplaceably subdivided and exploited.

One prime example on Vancouver Island of this lethal destruction lies in the White River watershed, which abounds in fish and wildlife resources. Logging plans for this watershed will destroy this habitat even though it provides a unique complete compact ecological unit for Roosevelt Elk. Phenomenal anadronous fish nurseries in the many elk meadows in this watershed will also be irreplaceably destroyed.

We recognize our prerogative and heritage but if we are to protect these for future Canadians we must have a Bill of Rights for fish and wildlife. This bill of rights must provide protection for wildlife species and populations and the vital habitat in which they live. It will give them the rights to co-exist in our land and will ensure that our birthright will be passed to future generations of Canadians.

Rocks Hope Brian's Habit Of Winning Will Continue

By JACK KEATING
Times Staff

Brian Thompson didn't travel 3,000 miles to become a loser.

But unless there's a drastic switch from the track record of the last seven years, that's what the2 4-year-old lacrosse player from Huntsville, Ontario, is destined to be.

Not Thompson's record, it's quite all right thank you. It could be the envy of almost any boxla player in Canada.

However, Thompson will be playing with the Victoria Shamrocks this year, and until the Rocks can prove they can beat their counterparts in the Western Lacrosse Association, another last-place finish is considered a possibility.

The Shamrocks' management say not, and they point to Thompson and Gary Austin, another Eastern recruit, as main reasons for a higher finish in 1972.

The six-foot forward has been on four Canadian championship teams (three junior Minto Cup winners with the Oshawa Green Gaels and last year with the Senior "B" Windsor Warlocks, has a prolific scoring record and in short has the credentials of a great player.

WINNING TEAMS

Certainly Thompson talked like a winner Wednesday night at George Pearkes Arena after the Rocks had just finished their first scrimmage of the year.

After discussing the great years in Oshawa, he was asked if he thought he could turn Victoria into a winner.

"It cheeses me off when I hear that," he said mildly. "No one person does that, it puts pressure on me but that doesn't bother me. It's all the players, team and management who have to work together.

"If I can contribute a little or even a great deal to that effort I'll do it," he added in a quiet tone that must have been picked up from five years as the morning disc jockey on a Huntsville radio station.

He's joining his younger brother Ivan on the Rocks and Brian hopes they will play on the same line. Ivan, who missed most of last season with a knee injury, was among the 20 or so players which coach Ed Kowalyk put through a stiff two-hour workout.

What about the Shamrocks?

Flashy Ranjit and Nirmal Dillon are returning. Charn Dhillon, Ken and Frank Alexander, Muzz Bryant, Tom and Dennis Somner, Tom Black, Brian Spaven, and Al Unwin and goalie George Grover are back from last year's club.

Other new faces trying out are Dave Thomson and Tom Levasseur, from the MacDonald's junior "B" team, Brian Travelbea, of Port Alberni, and Skip Chapman, veteran goalie who is coming out of retirement.

Fans Cheer on Czechs To Tie With Russians

PRAGUE (CP) — The Soviet Union came from behind to tie host Czechoslovakia, 3-3, Wednesday at the world hockey championships.

With the teams tied at seven points at the top of the standings in the double round-robin tournament, the return contest between them April 20 may well hold the key to the title. In case of a deadlock at the end of the tournament, goals scored in games between the tied teams decide the winner.

The defending-champion Russians displayed greater hockey skill, but the Czechoslovakian team was spurred to fantastic efforts by the cheers from a majority of the 14,000 spectators. Two thousand Russians were at the game, but they were silenced by the shouting home fans.

Sweden is third in the standings with six points. Switzerland and Finland have two points each and West Germany has none.

The Czechoslovak team went two goals ahead within six minutes, shaking the Russians out of their slick teamwork. The early goals were scored by Oldrich Machac and Richard Fards, the later on a power play after Mikhailov was sent off for roughing.

Vladimir Lutchenko of Russia scored the only goal of the second period. Early in the third, the home team went ahead, 3-1, on Jan Klapac's goal. This brought on a supreme effort by the Russians, with Yuli Blinov and Alexander Yakushev beating goalkeeper Jiri Holecek to tie the game.

Manchester City Gains In U.K. Soccer Title Race

LONDON (CP) — Manchester City strengthened its challenge for the English League soccer championship by beating Manchester United, 3-1, Wednesday night to move into a points tie with leading Derby County.

But Francis Lee struck back with two goals to bring his season's total to 32, the highest total achieved by any player in Europe this season. Rodney Marsh came on as substitute and scored City's third goal.

Derby and City each has 54 points from 39 games, one point ahead of Leeds, which has played one game less.

Chelsea improved its chances of becoming London's top club by beating Wolverhampton 2-0 to move into ciation Cup. Celtic, winner of sixth place.

In Glasgow, Celtic defeated Kilmarnock 3-1 in a semi-final of the Scottish Football Asso- the cup eight times in 10 years, meets either Rangers or Hibernian in the final May 6. The Rangers-Hibernian semi-final will be played Saturday.

Speedway Opens Sunday With Improved Program

But long-time fans will likely note a few changes when the season opens at the four-tenths of a mile paved Langford oval with a stock and super-stock program on Sunday.

And that's the first change. A total of eight Sunday afternoon events — including three in April and three in September — have been scheduled with the purpose of keeping fans relatively warm.

Making up the remainder of the 31-day season are 18 Saturday night stands, three afternoon shows on holiday Mondays as well as night events on one Tuesday and one Wednesday.

CLAIMERS

Other modifications from last season include elimination of the figure-eight class and insertion of a new class for novice drivers — the claimers.

This new group of cars will race on the smaller oval under much the same conditions as "claiming" horse races.

Foreign-stock racing will also be on the Western menu along with out-of-town competition from the Canadian-American Modified Racing Association, the Washington Racing Association, National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing and the Early-Late Stock Car Association of the Northwest.

Highlighting the season are the NASCAR "Western Grand National" race on July 3, the two-day CAMRA-sanctioned Daffodil Cup meet on May 6-7, the WRA super-modifed Strawberry Cup race on June 3 and the two international Drivers' Challenge races on July 18 (super-stocks) and Aug. 15 (super-modifieds).

Nanaimo has been added to the latter series and should bring additional entries, some from as far away as California, to Vancouver Island.

Over-all purses for both series have increased this season to over $20,000 for the super-stocks and over $25,000 for the modifieds.

Time trials will get under way at 1 p.m. on Sunday and racing can be expected to start at 2 p.m.

Paduano Gets Split Verdict

MONTREAL (CP) — Donato Paduano of Montreal outpunched and outboxed former welterweight champion Luis Rodriguez of Miami en route to a split-decision victory in their 10-round middleweight bout Wednesday night.

It was Paduano's 29th win in 33 professional fights. The Montreal boxer has lost three and has recorded one draw.

It Was Senior Citizens' Day in 2 Legislatures

the prairies

It was senior citizens' day in two legislatures Wednesday with Saskatchewan considering a petition to set up a senior citizens' department and Manitoba agreeing to pass on to old-age pensioners an increase in the federal government's guaranteed income supplement.

The petition at Regina was prepared by the Pensioners and Pioneers organization of Saskatoon. Welfare Minister Gordon Snyder said a commission should be formed by such groups and, once organized, the government would consult with it.

A delegation of 150 also asked for more recreation centres and housing. Liberal Opposition Leader D. G. Steuart said in an interview he supports establishment of a special department and a study of problems facing the elderly.

At Winnipeg, Health Minister Rene Toupin said the federal cost-of-living increase which comes into effect April 1 will mean an extra $2.70 for a single pensioner and $5.10 to married pensioners.

This will bring the combined old-age pension plus the guaranteed income supplement to $133.70 a month for single pensioners and $260.10 for married.

Apology Offered

EDMONTON (CP) — Agriculture Minister Hugh Horner apologized Wednesday for making a misleading statement to an opposition member of the legislature.

The request for the apology was made by Opposition Leader Harry Strom, who said Dr. Horner had given opposing answers to two similar questions during committee study of agriculture department spending estimates.

★ ★ ★

Freeze Urged

EDMONTON (CP) — The 13 public school board employees earning more than $20,000 annually should offer to forego any wage increases this year, Trustee Mrs. Edith Rogers told the board Tuesday night.

Trustees themselves should set an example and make no changes in their $4,000 annual honorariums, Trustee Herbert Jamieson said as trustees considered that portion of their 1972 budget dealing with administration.

★ ★ ★

Income Slashed

EDMONTON (CP) — Rapidly rising capital and operating expenses reduced Alberta Government Telephones net income to $2.8 million in 1971 from $5.7 million in 1970.

The Crown corporation's annual report, tabled in the legislature Wednesday, says the company was obliged to make large capital expenditures to keep pace with steadily increasing requirements for communications services.

★ ★ ★

High-Rise Opens

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's first high-rise development for senior citizens, the 17-storey Kiwanis Place, was opened Wednesday by Premier Peter Lougheed.

Built at a cost of more than $4 million, the building will accommodate 464 tenants and guests in addition to staff. It contains 272 self-contained bachelor suites and 68 one-bedroom units with provision for caretakers, lounges, recreation areas, laundry and meeting room facilities.

Pool for Kids

EDMONTON (CP) — Persons between the age of 14 and 16 would be able to enter a billiard room under a proposed amendment to the Billiard Rooms Act given first reading in the legislature Wednesday. They would have to have written consent of parents or guardian.

Peter Trynchy (PC-Whitecourt), who introduced the bill, said the changes would "provide many children with a form of recreation which now is not available to them."

★ ★ ★

Arbitration Set

EDMONTON (CP) — The contract dispute between the University of Alberta board of governors and the university's 1,500 academic staff went to arbitration Wednesday.

"Final position" arbitration will be used, believe the first time in a Canadian university dispute, to settle the 1972-73 salary contract. Both sides now will submit written statements to an arbitration officer outlining their final position. The officer will hold one or two hearings with both parties.

Feedlot Studied

SASKATOON (CP) — A report is expected this fall on the necessity of establishing an association of feedlot operators in Saskatchewan following appointment of a five-man committee to study the possibility Tuesday.

The committee was created as Saskatchewan feedlot operators ended a two-day seminar and it was instructed to provide a report to a meeting of the operators this fall.

Irving's Book 1 of 3 Baring Hughes Hoax

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Clifford Irving's fake autobiography of millionaire Howard Hughes may never see the light of day, but at least three books now are being written about the hoax itself and how it was finally unmasked.

First to appear will be an account written by a team of three journalists from the London Sunday Times—Stephen Fay, Lewis Chester and Magnus Linklater.

Titled Hoax: The Inside Story of the Howard Hughes-Clifford Irving Affair, the book is due to be published in New York in May by Viking Press.

The 100,000-word account will provide a detailed description, laced with some humor, of how Irving tried to swindle the McGraw Hill Publishing Co. out of at least $750,000 by producing a fabricated autobiography of the Texas-born recluse.

Irving himself, awaiting sentencing June 16 together with his wife and his researcher, Richard Suskind, is also working on a book about what has come to be known as the "Howard Hughes Caper."

Irving, 41, is thought to be hoping to raise enough cash to pay back all or most of the money he wheedled out of McGraw Hill.

GOT $100,000 IN ADVANCE

The sum includes a $100,000 advance for his own work on the purported memoirs, plus $15,000 in travel expenses to enable him to conduct interviews with Hughes which Irving now admits never took place.

IRVING

There is speculation that some publishing firms, after McGraw Hill's unhappy experience, might shy away from another Irving manuscript regardless of its merits.

The third book in preparation about the Hughes affair is being written by James Sherwood, a 35-year-old writer friend of Irving's.

Sherwood has lived for the last two years at New York's Chelsea Hotel, a favorite rendezvous for artists, writers and actors, where Irving and his family have also been staying since they arrived here in January.

As a result, Sherwood had a ringside seat as the Irving drama unfolded with its almost daily quota of headlines.

Sherwood said he has completed a 60-page synopsis for a book on the Irving hoax and now is submitting it to publishers through his agent.

DANCERS IMPRESS CRITICS

LONDON (CP) — The Toronto Dance Theatre performed its second program here Wednesday night and the critics continue to be generally impressed by the group though somewhat baffled by its more complex offerings.

The Times suggests it was rash of the company to tour abroad at this stage, although it has a "sound professional level of dancing ability," but adds that the experience probably will do it good.

Philip Hope-Wallace of The Guardian says he was glad to see the 250-seat theatre full because the company's avant-garde work, while commanding respect for its style, might be dismissed by some as solemn and pretentious.

"It is not so, but story-lines are not at all easy to follow, except in the most considerable of last night's offerings, A Thread of Sand."

The Guardian critic says this account of the life of Christ contained "some beautiful things," with a "most moving crucifixion" and choreography by David Earle that proved "spare and effective."

But Hope-Wallace says the two earlier offerings, Encounter and Rhapsody in the Late Afternoon, baffled him. A similar reaction comes from Times critic John Percival, who found the opening tableau of Encounter promised more than it fulfilled.

"It has an air of wanting to mean something—but I cannot imagine what."

The Daily Telegraph calls this ballet an "original and intelligent version of the life of Christ" which makes its impact through bold groups and "roughly expressive gestures well performed by the four main dancers. . . ."

The electronic music of Ann Southam set the mood for each scene and supported the dance patterns with "a fine feeling for theatrical effect," says The Telegraph.

Oil Company Donates Art Works

OTTAWA (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. gave away to the public archives Wednesday its controversial collection of illustrations by Canadian artist C. W. Jefferys.

Under the gaze of company-owned television cameras and two of Jefferys's daughters, Imperial's chief executive officer, W. O. Twaits, turned over all rights to the 1,200-piece collection.

In recent years, the collection caused controversy when the United States-owned company refused to allow a Canadian nationalist group to reproduce one of the drawings in a publication called the Canadian Patriot's Handbook.

Imperial bought the collection in 1951 on the understanding that it would make reproductions available to any group for educational or cultural purposes. But there was always a limitation that the drawings not be commercially exploited, Twaits said.

Jeffery's drawings, done during a 60-year period up to his death in 1951 at the age of 82, portrays Canada's early history in painstaking detail. He used hard, clean lines, largely in pen and ink, to illustrate things ranging from Sir Alexander Mackenzie's trip to the Pacific to Sam Slick drawings for stories by T. C. Haliburton.

Dominion Archivist W. I. Smith said the collection would continue to be made available for educational and cultural purposes as well as the general public.

Extortion Draws One Year

VANCOUVER (CP) — A University of British Columbia student was given a one-year sentence Wednesday when he pleaded guilty to the attempted extortion of $10,000 from a Vancouver man.

Neil Lawrence Cowan, 20, was charged after Alan M. Eyre, president of a Vancouver company, received notes threatening him and his family and instructions on where to leave $10,000 extortion money in Stanley Park.

Cowan was arrested Feb. 5 as Eyre was on his way to the designated spot with the money.

Provincial Court Judge Maurice Mulligan said he was imposing a sentence "somewhere in between a deterrent to protect society and rehabilitation of the accused."

Hospital Cuts Staff

SURREY (CP) — Ian Manning, administrator of Surrey Memorial Hospital, said Wednesday that government financial policies are forcing the hospital to lay off between 20 and 25 employees.

In a note to employees, he said he "cannot endorse this move as being in the patients' best interest, but regretably the administration and board of trustees have no effective means of altering government financial policy."

Manning said the hospital operated at a $86,000 deficit last year and has been spending about $20,000 more a month this year than the British Columbia Hospital Insurance Service is expected to pay.

Interest Dwindles

BURNABY (CP) — Interest in the proposed third Burrard Inlet crossing appears to be dwindling, Mayor Robert Prittie said Wednesday in opening a public hearing on the issue which attracted an audience of less than 50 persons.

Robert Daley, the only proponent of the crossing to prepare a brief, left before speaking, telling reporters: "There's no point in trying to change their (the audience's) viewpoint."

The other 15 briefs were against the crossing, with several suggesting an overall regional assessment of transportation and a plebiscite on the crossing issue.

'Old Boys' Bother

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ald. Brian Calder said today he is pulling out of politics for at least two years.

He said in an interview he has become infuriated at the old boys, the windbagging and petty politicking by city council while the city's problems remain unsolved.

"This isn't a sudden move," he said. "I've been mulling it over in my own mind for the past three or four months. I'm trying to keep my sanity, to get back into the real world.

"It's like being a kindergarten teacher locked up with the kids for six months. After a while you start thinking and acting like them."

'Junk for Indians'

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A spokesman for an Indian co-operative in Prince Rupert has labelled the federal government's latest offer to help Indians take over small fish canneries as an attempt to push "a bunch of old junk" on the Indians.

Stan Thomas of the Pacific Northwest Co-operative claimed Tuesday that many of the canneries could not meet fisheries' specifications. He said if Indians took them over, the federal government might be able to turn around and say in two years, "see, the Indians couldn't make them go."

Escapees Captured

HANEY (CP) — Corrections officers and RCMP have recaptured all three inmates of Haney Correctional Centre who escaped from a work party Tuesday after knocking a guard unconscious with a shovel.

Corrections officers picked up Robert Wayne Hoover of Estevan, Sask., and Mark Bennedet of Trail, overnight within a mile of the centre, about 20 miles east of Vancouver.

Terry Aubrey Jack had been recaptured by RCMP in the Haney area shortly after the escape.

POLLEN SHOULD 'KNOW BETTER'

Collective bargaining without the right to strike is "ridiculous," a Victoria union leader said today.

Murray Drew, president of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America, was replying to city mayor Peter Pollen who said Wednesday the use of the strike by civil servants is the first step towards anarchy.

Pollen said collective bargaining is the right of all employees, but the use of the strike weapon is not.

Drew said the strike is the only way employees can put economic pressure on an employer — or vice-versa in a lockout — and he said Pollen "should know better" because of his background in labor relations.

Pay Increase Motion Goes Before Council

Victoria council will decide today whether to grant itself a pay increase.

A motion to grant the mayor and aldermen a 6.5 per cent wage hike is on the order paper, but it received some opposition even before reaching the council chamber.

Ald. Percy Frampton registered his doubt about the measure earlier today, passing up the chance to sign the written motion but putting his signature on others.

The mayor is now paid $15,000 a year and aldermen each receive $3,600.

Raising the question of aldermanic pay in formal council session was not unexpected.

Mayor Peter Pollen said earlier he thought the aldermen greatly deserved a raise but he thought the chief magistrate's salary is "adequate."

Gas Station Gulf Widens

Firm's Intentions Revealed in Letter

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Further evidence that Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. knew the Hillside-Scott service station would continue selling gasoline is contained in a company executive's letter written last February.

Victoria Ald. Harold Olafson last week promised no more concessions for oil companies after the Hillside-Scott service station put up a Mohawk Oil sign in March.

Olafson charged that Gulf Oil, which last year operated a Royalite oil outlet on the lot, had promised to reduce the number of its outlets in Greater Victoria.

This promise came when Gulf applied for a rezoning at the nearby Hillside-Shelbourne intersection in order to build a large oil outlet and service centre.

A letter obtained by the Times says Gulf Oil as late as Feb. 9, 1972, intended to keep the Hillside-Scott outlet in operation, either through a lease to another oil company or under the Gulf name.

The letter is signed by D. S. McDonald, manager, Metro Motorist Market, of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.

It was written in reply to a letter from the owner of the Hillside-Scott property, who had asked about Gulf's intentions.

UNAWARE

Sutherland asked by way of a statement in his Feb. 4 letter to Gulf Oil:

"In view of the fact that the Gulf Oil Co. Ltd. have built a large unit approximately one block away, it is now my understanding that Gulf Oil will relinquish the lease in favor of either another oil company or myself."

STATION STAYED

Gulf's D. S. McDonald answered: "We have made tentative arrangements to lease this service station, but, failing this, it will be operated by Gulf Oil Canada."

These arrangements did not transpire because in mid-March, a Mohawk sign appeared on the property.

City hall became concerned with the development. Business and sign erection permits had apparently not been correctly applied for, and the oil station remained in operation despite Gulf's original statement that it was phasing out smaller service stations.

The minutes of the council meeting Jan. 19, 1971, record a Gulf Oil executive, W. O. C. Wingham stating Gulf's intention to consolidate its operations and reduce the number of outlets from 36 to 16 in the Greater Victoria area.

The Hillside-Scott outlet was included in the discussion because Gulf was applying for permission to build the larger Gulf outlet about a block away.

TIRES FLATTENED AT STRUCK PLANT

Air was let out of the tires of a number of fork-lift trucks and other vehicles overnight at strikebound Butler-Lafarge Ltd. on Bay Street.

Company president W. T. Crampton said today the incident was "only a minor thing, no damage."

He said some of the vehicles have been used in the yard during the strike because supervisors are loading for non-union operators coming in for materials.

PROTEST MARCH

Student Amchitka Antiwar Committee will hold a march Saturday protesting Canadian involvement in the Vietnam war.

Protesters will meet at 1 p.m. at Centennial Square, then march to the Legislative Buildings.

SAAC spokesmen said the march will be part of a Canada-wide rally for an immediate end to the war.

Big Pay Hike For Prisoners

A massive wage boost is on the way for a small group of local construction workers — without negotiations or even the hint of a strike.

Inmates of William Head minimum security prison, who are now paid a maximum of 85 cents a day for regular prison duties, will get $1.75 an hour if they are selected to work on a prison construction job starting around the middle of next month.

Jail superintendent Gamaliel Milner said today he has been getting "quite a few applications" from prisoners who want to work on the project and receive the federal minimum wage.

The experimental move in the prison reform program was announced six months ago by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer. If successful at William Head, it will be introduced at other establishments.

Milner said the new pay rate will come into effect when work starts about the middle of May on building a new complex of vocational shops, with some outside contractor help but mainly with prison labor.

About five inmates will be employed initially and later a maximum of 20.

Men chosen will have to be at "a certain position" in their sentence, he explained, so that the work counts as part of their pre-release program. Long-term prisoners will not be eligible.

Milner said the selected workers will be either those with prison training in the various trades or those with outside experience in the construction industry.

'INDUSTRIAL TEMPO'

A time schedule for the project is being drawn up, he said, and the prisoners will have to work at "industrial tempo" equivalent to any normal construction job to qualify for the $1.75 an hour pay.

Prisoners will have to pay the prison for room, board and clothing and will have to pay income tax and unemployment insurance.

As the men will have paid into the unemployment insurance fund, they will be able to collect from it if they remain unemployed after release.

The money will also enable prisoners to help support their family and save money for their eventual release.

FARQUHAR

'Vicious Attack' Fails To Show

By BRIAN BUTTERS

University of Victoria president pro tem Hugh Farquhar steeled himself and members of the UVic senate Wednesday night for a "vicious attack" on himself which never came about — at least in the public part of the senate meeting.

Farquhar, in his president's report, told senate that "several people have come to me in the last few days to warn me that I would be the object of a vicious attack here tonight."

"I was told that there is some sort of nefarious plot to try to discredit me in front of the senate," he said.

However, whatever Farquhar feared never came up in the public part of the meeting. An in-camera session was held following the public portion.

Farquhar said he found it "deplorable" that members of the senate would use what he termed "subterfuge" and "cloak and dagger stuff."

When pressed for names of the people involved in the alleged plot, Farquhar said he did not want to elaborate in public.

He said he only knew what was told to him "in confidence" and that he would not normally bring such matters up in senate.

"It is the role of senate to deal with academic matters, not with personal vendettas."

Farquhar then said he had tried as best he could to solve some university problems at the departmental level. It is believed it was meetings he had with departments in the faculty of fine arts that aroused internal controversy.

"Some of these matters are very delicate, very difficult to deal with. If there is interference by senate or anyone else it will just make my job that much tougher," he said.

Farquhar's remarks came at the end of his report, in which he announced that the board of governors will make several appointments following their meeting this month.

Appointments expected are: chairman of the theatre department, vacated by Ralph Allen, who leaves to accept a post with the University of Tennessee; chairman of the department of linguistics, whose head, J. P. Vinay, has been appointed dean of arts and science, replacing John Climenhaga; dean of the faculty of graduate studies, where A. R. Fontaine is dean pro tem.

Farquhar said no appointment will likely come this month for the position of dean of fine arts, with present dean Peter Garvie leaving to take a post with the University of Texas, or for the position of administration vice-president, with Jack Kyle leaving to take a top administrative post with the metropolitan government of Winnipeg.

From the PM, Rocks on the Greenhouse

THERE ARE TIMES when it occurs to me that Pierre Elliott Trudeau, the sardonic philosopher at Ottawa, goes out of his way to make square-generation Canadians frothing mad. Probably this is good for us. It takes our minds off our troubles, sets the adrenalin flowing, and may even improve the digestion.

The most recent Trudeau utterance to rouse the national dander has to do with work and people who would avoid it in their search for self-fulfilment. These, the PM suggested, might prefer to exercise their right to live on unemployment insurance.

I'm not sure that Canadians were ever hit with so startling a viewpoint before. Coming from a national leader of an Old Line party, it was sheer heresy. It landed like a rock on a greenhouse to embarrass determined Liberals and scandalize the daylights out of all who believe in a day's work for a day's pay.

Several apologists have tried to convince me that Trudeau didn't really mean it the way it sounded, or was misquoted, or that he probably added a rider which escaped the hearing of his audience.

Tosh and hogwash! I think that Trudeau spoke his mind, as he will still be doing when his time comes to mount the tumbril for a trip to the political guillotine.

There's also a disconcerting possibility that the aristocrat who shattered the prime-ministerial mould will still be making more sense than his executioners.

That admission comes hard, because there is much about Trudeau that causes my hackles to bristle. He can charm a bird off its perch when the mood is on him, but he is emphatically not a man of the people. Never having known poverty or unemployment at first hand, his attitudes toward both are coldly academic.

He impresses me as brilliant dilettante playing at politics, but not taking the game too seriously.

Nor can I agree with him that the person capable of working — and with work available — has the right that Trudeau claims for him. Unless unemployment insurance has strayed far from its original intent, it remains merely a rainy-day umbrella paid for by the employed to tide them over periods of unemployment.

But setting this personal, conditioned opinion aside, I'm forced into some uncomfortable conclusions about this most disconcerting prime minister.

If he does not match up to the Canadian dream (an ectoplasmic something that takes its shape from the beliefs and prejudices of the dreamer) no politician deals so bluntly with the Canadian fact as we find it in the 1970s.

By way of demonstration, consider a low-keyed Trudeau statement made on an earlier occasion. The gist of it was that if we are to achieve the national independence we profess to want, the cost will be increased government control and a reduction of individual freedoms.

In political terms, the remark was unpardonable. We were actually being warned that we couldn't expect to have our cake and eat it too.

The fact that the warning was timely doesn't make it any more palatable. However, it induces a reluctant respect for the truth-teller, even though it may not add to our affection for him.

My own reaction to many Trudeau statements is first a huffy and total rejection, then a later and cooler weighing. Take that outrageous nonsense about the right to a free ride while seeking self-fulfilment.

Perhaps it's a generational hangup, but I find the Trudeau thesis totally repugnant. Yet those who share my view may very well be dragged kicking and screaming into an era when work will be the privilege of Canadians who find self-fulfilment in it, and guaranteed income the right of those who don't.

Fantastic? Inevitable might be a better word. The signs are already plain.

Trudeau may pay for his attitudes and his mistakes at the next federal election. We could find ourselves settling down with a national sigh of relief under a Conservative leader who would be much easier on the blood pressure.

If so, it's possible that we'll have cause to remember Pierre Elliot Trudeau as a prime minister cursed with the habit of telling us what we should be hearing rather than what Canadians would prefer to hear.

$50,000 for Freighter?

The freighter Vanlene, aground off Vancouver Island's west coast for a month, is for sale for scrap, a Vancouver underwriter's office said today.

Dennis Morrell, staff surveyor with Salvage Association London, said two or three parties have expressed interest but there have been no bids yet.

The 8,500-ton Vanlene struck a reef alongside Austin Island in Barkley Sound March 14 while en route to Vancouver from Japan with a cargo of 300 cars. While some of the cars were salvaged, more than half were ruined by sea water.

While Morrell declined to speculate what the freighter might bring, another source said earlier it might fetch around $50,000.

The costs involved in reaching it, cutting it up and transporting the scrap are factors reducing its value, the source said.

School a Community 'Catalyst'

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

family

WENDY DEY – EDITOR

A community schools program can be the spark to set off a whole chain of community activity, a Vancouver community school director said Wednesday evening.

"The school can be a catalyst in total community development," said Jack Stevens, director of North Vancouver's community school project at Queen Mary School.

Stevens and Nancy Cooley, social planner in the Vancouver department of social planning and community development, talked of their experience with community schools at a public meeting in the Ewing Building of Camosun College.

Miss Cooley echoed Stevens' statement.

When there's a community school, or even a community school being planned in which citizens are totally involved, "there's a focus of activity, and once you provide that focus . . . people come out of the woodwork," she said.

The provincial department of education favors the community use of schools, but it isn't prepared to pay for special or enlarged school facilities for community use, a department spokesman said today.

"The department will consider modification of school design to facilitate community schools," said J. L. Canty, superintendant of education in charge of special services. However, these modifications for community purposes must not interfere with the instruction of children, he added.

"As far as we're concerned, the instruction of kids is first and foremost," said Canty.

If special or larger facilities, such as a larger gymnasium, are built at a school for community purposes, these must be paid for by sources other than the school boards, said Canty.

The use of regular school facilities by the community, such as evening courses in classrooms, is the decision of the local school board, he said. The school board can prohibit community use of school facilities if it interferes with regular teaching, he added.

Two Projects

The two speakers last night described two quite different community schools projects.

Stevens' is a project that began with one man, himself, organizing evening crafts and activities programs in an older elementary school. Then the local PTA got interested. They applied for, and got, a $28,000 federal local initiatives grant, and from there the program expanded.

"If we're going to pull people away from TV sets, we're going to have to give them what they want," said Stevens.

What citizens in his school neighborhood wanted was a co-operative free dental service. In two weeks, the citizens' committee had rounded up eight dentist volunteers and their nurses. The service is now treating emergency dental cases from the school.

As well, there's a co-op babysitting service at the school, and a shopping service for senior citizens, with groceries delivered by a volunteer. With the federal grant money, the PTA has hired 11 new staff members, including a social worker, a community development worker, and two home visitors.

In the beginning, said Stevens, he had to initiate the activity. Then the community started to get involved.

"Now we're at the point that I'm starting to serve them as their executive officer," he said.

The project Miss Cooley talked about, the Britannia Community Services Centre in northeast Vancouver, is on a much grander scale. The project, which will incorporate Britannia Senior Secondary School and build an elementary school, a library and many other community facilities, has a budget of $5.25 million and will cover 20 acres.

"It's probably too ambitious . . ." Miss Cooley said. "We think it's very exciting and we think it's going to be successful."

The multi-purpose centre will try to meet the changing needs of all the different groups in the neighborhood — age groups, interest groups, ethnic groups — she said. It will include many community facilities, such as a swimming pool and sauna, gymnasiums, one library to serve both senior and elementary schools as well as the community, an ice rink, a craft centre, and many multi-purpose rooms.

Citizens Active

Enormous and demanding though the project is, there has been active citizens' participation every step of the way, said Miss Cooley.

She is one of two city representatives on the project's advisory committee, which includes one school board representative, one parks board representative, and six elected citizens' representatives. This committee does more than advise, said Miss Cooley.

"It has become the recognized working force for the Britannia centre," she said.

Great pains were taken to ensure that the centre built would meet the community's needs and wishes, said Miss Cooley. Information sheets were sent out in Chinese, English and Italian, the area's main languages. A questionnaire survey of 1,400 representative members of the community was conducted, and from this survey a priority list of facilities the community wanted was drawn up.

Object of all community schools programs is to get the school into the community and the community into the school, said Stevens. School children can learn in the community and down at the docks, he said; adults can participate in programs and use facilities at the school.

Chairman of the public meeting was Len Stevenson, who is chairman of the community use advisory committee connected with a new senior secondary school planned for the Burnside area of Saanich.

The advisory committee, which was formed in March and has 10 members, is exploring the possibility of building a school that can serve the whole community. A second citizens' advisory committee is studying curriculums.

The community use committee is preparing a questionnaire to try to find out what people in the area of the new school want in terms of a community school.

"I think what will come out of it is a list of priorities," said Mrs. Barbara Blower, a committee member.

Stevenson said he was excited by the community school idea. "I hope it to mean a place where I can go with my family and use the facilities, not only to study but to play together," he said.

Police Foundation Hits Attitudes Toward Women

NEW YORK (AP) — Police departments in the United States discriminate against women, to the detriment of women, the police and the public, says a recent study by the Police Foundation.

"In many cities there is a total fear and real hostility to the idea of having women doing anything in policing other than secretarial duties and dealing with juveniles," says 29-year-old Catherine Milton, assistant director of the foundation.

The foundation received a $30 million grant by the Ford Foundation in 1970 to study new methods for policing.

Mrs. Milton found that, in general:

● Police departments are turning away qualified women, but many departments are having trouble recruiting men.

● Women are sometimes required to have more education than men in order to qualify for police work.

● Women who have been hired as police officers are not used to their full potential. In most cities, they are still kept out of traffic, patrol and detective work.

● In some cities, women aren't allowed to take exams which could qualify them for supervisory jobs.

However, she said, she has also found encouraging signs.

In several cities—among them Peoria, Ill.; Indianapolis, Ind., and Miami—police departments are sending women out on a regular patrol beat. Washington, D.C., is recruiting an experimental patrol force of some 100 women.

Mrs. Milton said there is evidence to suggest that a policewoman may provoke less hostile behavior from people than a man.

Women's Rights Group Eyes Politics

Candidates for the expected provincial and federal elections might be advised to start deciding where they stand on the question of women's rights and the position of women in Canadian society.

The tip comes from Marged Dewar, of the local Status of Women Action Group (SWAG), who says the group is planning to play a significant role in the forthcoming elections.

Besides encouraging as many women as possible to run for seats, she said, SWAG members intend to make it known that they will support any candidates — male or female — who support the basic philosophy of women's rights.

To find out where candidates stand on this issue, the group will invite them to address pre-election meetings, as it did recently in the case of the four women candidates in the Victoria byelection.

Miss Dewar, one of 500 delegates who attended the first national conference of women's organizations in Toronto last weekend, said the "overwhelming feeling" to emerge from the conference was that women must become more heavily involved in the political process.

"Many women tend to think of politics as exclusively a man's field," she said.

Although B.C. with Ontario appears to have the strongest nucleus of support for status-of-women organizations, Miss Dewar said there was general agreement among the 15 or 16 B.C. delegates to the conference that a provincial organization is badly needed.

Saskatchewan women's groups are holding their first provincial conference this summer financed by a federal grant, and B.C. women would like to hold a similar conference as a first step toward establishing a provincial organization.

DELINQUENT GIRLS ON INCREASE, ATTITUDES BLAMED

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Juvenile delinquency in the United States among girls aged 10-17 rose twice as fast as crime involving boys from 1969 to 1970, a U.S. government crime report said this week. It blamed the "more aggressive . . . more independent" behavior of girls.

In 1970, the report said juvenile courts for the first time handled more than one million cases involving boys and girls. Courts in rural areas showed a 13 per cent increase over the previous year and courts in cities and suburbs reported 6 per cent increases.

But the health, education and welfare department study said the rate of increase in delinquency cases slowed for the first time in five years.

"The rise in girls' delinquency has generally been attributed to their changing attitude towards society and society's changing attitude towards them," the report said.

"Instead of the passive role assumed by girls in the past and society's protective role towards them, girls are becoming more aggressive and more independent in their day-to-day activities."

The report said that although delinquency is still primarily a boys' problem, the boy-to-girl ratio of court referrals narrowed from 4-1 in mid-1960s to 3-1 in 1970.

For the period covered by the study, girls' court cases showed a one-year increase of 7 per cent in suburbs, 11 per cent in cities and 20 per cent in rural areas for a national increase of 10 per cent. Boys' cases increased 5 per cent. The population growth of children aged 10-17 during the period was 2 per cent.

Administration officials emphasized that the rate of increase in juvenile court cases declined for the first time in five years. Each year since 1965, the percentage increase in cases was higher than the previous year, but in 1970 it was only 6 per cent compared with a 10 per cent rise in 1969, the report said.

You can have a leaflet with detailed instructions how to design and make a one-of-a-kind punch rug that can be machine washed and tumble dried.

Even though burlap can be used as base, the leaflet recommends a good strong cotton Hopsack. It also tells you what kind of needle, and how much yarn you will need and that you have to have a frame, either home-made or bought, on which to work.

As to your design, first draw a sketch on squared paper and then transfer it on to the Hopsack in corresponding dimensions.

You will also find illustrations how to thread the special rug punch needle and how to use it.

With your request for a free leaflet about Rug Punching send a large (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Patons and Baldwins (Canada) Ltd., 1001 Roselawn Avenue, Toronto 19, Ontario.

Please allow at least two to three weeks for delivery.

Home Economics:

'We're Trying to Get Where the Kids Are'

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

At Colquitz Junior Secondary School, Grade 9 home economics students are busy making cheesecake, lasagna and cheese fondue.

Grade 12 cooking students at Esquimalt Senior Secondary School will prepare and serve restaurant lunches to teaching staff every day next week.

And a Grade 12 textiles student at the same school is making a fringed suede vest with Indian beadwork as part of her term project. Others are weaving belts and purses, even earrings.

There have been a few changes made in home economics courses in the past few years. These changes haven't been earth-shattering — students still sew blouses, make baking powder biscuits and learn about good nutrition. But home economics courses are expanding into new areas, moved both by teachers and students.

"We're trying to get where the kids are," says Mrs. Eileen Dishaw, home economics consultant for the Greater Victoria School Board.

If students are interested in health foods or handicrafts, 'home ec' courses should include these subjects, she says.

Handicrafts are of special interest to Mrs. Gwen Whittaker, of Esquimalt Senior Secondary. She has small "inkle" weaving looms for making belts, and two large looms for making purses and wall hangings.

Next year, if the department of education approves the course, Mrs. Whittaker will be teaching a handicrafts course at Esquimalt.

With people getting more and more leisure time, it's logical that they are becoming more interested in handicrafts, she says. She hopes the course, which will include weaving, batik and leather work, will attract boys, too.

Boys Established

Boys are already an established part of 'home ec' cooking courses, comprising about a third of total enrolment in area schools.

Some of them are just there to eat, says Mrs. Rosemary Bentes, who teaches a class of Grade 10 boys at Colquitz Junior Secondary School. Boys love meat cookery, she says, and the Grade 10 class will cook a big barbecue in June.

However, the best gourmet cooks and pastry chefs are all men, says Mrs. Bentes, so she has her students bake bread as well.

Mrs. Bentes emphasizes shopping and budgeting, as well as cooking, for her Grade 8, 9 and 10 students. Students are told to plan a week's meals for a family of four living on a certain weekly income.

"You're competing with TV all the time. They have to be amused," Mrs. Bentes says of her students.

She takes them to a butcher's, to a creamery where cottage cheese is made, to a health food store.

Until Grade 11, 'home ec' courses include both cooking and textiles. In Grade 11 a separate cooking course and home management course are offered.

The home management course covers budgeting, credit buying, interior, decoration, and consumerism. Mrs. Whittaker at Esquimalt describes the course as "management of money and time and planning of a home."

She has her students plan their ideal home, drawing the floor plans, choosing the furniture and figuring out the cost. Students learn to make all sorts of home decorations, such as woven or embroidered wall hangings and mobiles.

Mrs. Jean Kerr has tried to make her Grade 12 cooking course at Esquimalt a commercial course, preparing students to be waitresses, short-order cooks and other restaurant employees.

Geared to Need

"We don't really have commercial equipment but we try to give them the feel of it," she says. 'Home ec' courses must be geared to the need of each area, says Mrs. Kerr, and the need at her school is for a commercial course.

Menus students will serve the teaching staff next week include Chinese meat balls, chocolate cream pie, chicken salad and pineapple slice, all very reasonably priced.

Cost is emphasized in Mrs. Kerr's course as well. Students have to figure how much they must charge for meals in order to make a profit in a restaurant. Mrs. Kerr takes them on field trips to cafeterias and hospitals, "wherever they serve food."

The commercial course isn't offered at all at Oak Bay Senior Secondary School, because there isn't a demand for it.

Instead, Mrs. Corine Wickson has turned the Grade 12 cooking course into a foreign and gourmet foods course. Students choose a country or area — Japan, China, the Middle East—and start researching.

Mrs. Wickson insists the class studies the culture of the country or area they've chosen, then dig up appropriate recipes to cook. The class works together to prepare a whole meal from this one area. With Mrs. Wickson, they seek out ingredients in delicatessens and specialty shops.

"The teachers are trying to use what is relevant for the students for the students' instruction," says Mrs. Margaret Martin. Mrs. Martin, with Mrs. Dishaw, is home economics consultant for the Greater Victoria School Board, and she teaches 'home ec' at Victoria High School.

No longer do 'home ec' courses prepare girls for the role of housewife, both consultants agree.

'Help Them Face The Situation'

Emotionally disturbed people need a good listener, but not a sympathetic one, a local psychiatrist told a workshop on mental health Wednesday afternoon.

"You listen to the person's feelings . . . you never sympathize," Dr. A. R. Stewart told about 40 women who attended the workshop in First United Church.

Dr. Stewart was a member of a panel which discussed how relatives and friends can help mentally ill people recover. Others on the panel were general practitioner Dr. G. Scott Wallace, Msgr. Michael O'Connell of St. Andrew's Cathedral, and psychiatric social worker Paul Bingham of the Mental Health Centre.

Sounding Board

If you sympathize with an emotionally disturbed person, you encourage him to look for sympathy instead of facing up to his own responsibility in the situation, said Dr. Stewart. The listener should be a sounding board for the patient, not an emotional garbage tin, he said.

Talking is the most mature way people can get rid of feelings, said Dr. Stewart. "It takes quite a mature person to listen to a person talking about violence without getting upset and running for a neighbor," he said, but that listening is very important.

What Dr. Stewart does is "face the patient up with his responsibility," He said. "They're the only ones who can change their behavior. You can't change their husband or the man next door."

"Some people are locked into bad situations," said Dr. Stewart. A woman with an unhappy childhood may expect little from life and so endure a husband who beats her. This is a pattern that can be broken, he said.

Change Quickly

"I'm always impressed at how quickly they can change when they really want to," Dr. Stewart said. "If people don't want to change, that's their prerogative."

When a person decides he wants to change and try to solve his problems, "the price is almost always (his) social status," said Dr. Wallace. A woman may have to get out of a bad marriage and live on her own.

A mentally ill person must go home from the hospital to an understanding atmosphere, said Dr. Wallace. People must look on mental illness the same way they do a physical illness like asthma, he said; sufferers have periodic attacks, but they can recover.

A patient returning home "may not be completely normal . . ." said Dr. Wallace. "She may have moods of depression or agitation or feel like punching someone in the nose." What she and the family must learn is that these moods will pass, he said.

Miss Anne Pask, a public health nurse who runs a rehabilitation home for the mentally ill, was chairman of the panel discussion.

Miss Pask said that mental problems, stress, or "disease" play an important part in such health problems as drug abuse, alcoholism, venereal disease and accidents.

"Its being uncomfortable within oneself that is at the root of a lot of disease," she said.

Move Away

After the panel discussion, Miss Alice Carroll, consultant of social services for the Mental Health Branch of the department of health, talked about decentralization of mental health facilities in the province.

The department is moving away from centralized mental hospitals and developing more psychiatric units in general hospitals, she said.

Short-term psychiatric patients will be treated in these acute units in general hospitals, said Miss Carroll. Long-term psychiatric patients will be cared for in the community in generalized, or specialized boarding homes.

As well, 24 regional mental health centres have been set up throughout the province, she said.

The workshop, which ended with four discussion groups on specific aspects of mental health, was sponsored by the standing committee of Ecumenical Women's Outreach. The committee has organized a tour of the White Cross Centre at 1450 Elford for next Wednesday afternoon.

Rejection Cancer Cure?

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — A potential cancer cure based on the body's natural rejection of foreign substances was revealed Wednesday by two University of Chicago pathologists.

The researchers, Drs. John Coon and Robert Hunter, said experiments on guinea pigs successfully have made the body to reject substances "which it usually rejects by manufacturing antibodies through a cellular type of immunity that can effectively reject cancers."

The doctors said their newfound ability to reach the parachortex region of the lymph node, from which antibodies come, may pave the way for production of a cancer vaccine.

Heretofore, antibodies have not been effective against cancer cells, but the doctors noted that with cellular immunity, a living cell repels the invading materials.

"Many human and animal cancers can be rejected by cellular immunity in much the same way the heart or kidney grafts are rejected," Dr. Coon said. "These experiments provide the first rationale for the production of semi-synthetic cancer vaccines.

Coon presented his findings in a paper prepared for the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

ROOSTER ATTACKS

PALERMO, Sicily (Reuter) — A five-year-old girl was savagely attacked by a half-starved rooster in the streets of a small port near here as she was nibbling a piece of bread. The bird flew at the girl knocking her down and repeated pecked at her face until she dropped the bread.

I'll Drink to That

KITCHENER, Ont., (CP) — A drink before dinner is just what the doctor ordered and residents of the Sunnyside Home for the Aged have their own bar to fill the prescription.

One of the first senior citizens' homes in Ontario to set up a bar, Sunnyside has been offering its residents up to two drinks in the later afternoon for five years.

The residents agree with a United States doctor who said recently that moderate quantities of beer have "a remarkable effect on many elderly people in hospitals."

"I'll drink to that," said Charlie Bindermagel, 85.

Classy Dog Catcher

Jean Dolata used to be a telephone operator but hated being stuck indoors all day. So Mrs. Dolata, of Eugene, Ore., became the area's first woman dog catcher. Says Mrs. Dolata: "I like animals. I love to drive. And I like people. That's why I applied for the job." (AP Wirephoto).

dear abby

All Responsible

DEAR ABBY: I would like to know who is responsible for the care and entertainment of an elderly mother who lives alone and has no hobbies or interests.

There are five of us children, all married and living in the area. I feel that the responsibility should be shared equally among the two sons and three daughters. My brothers feel that a mother is the responsibility of her daughters. What would you suggest I do about this situation?—Troubled Daughter.

DEAR TROUBLED: Who is responsible? You all are. What should you do about the situation? Exactly what I presume you have been doing. Giving your mother all the time and attention you can, and reminding your brothers that she is also their mother, and they ought to be ashamed of themselves for neglecting her.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns saying grace at the table. My husband and I never had said grace, however we do thank the Lord for our food, along with all our other blessings in our prayers at night.

When we invite a certain couple over for supper, they always say grace out loud at our table. Correct me if I am wrong, but I think this is very impolite. If they feel like saying grace, they should say it to themselves because by this time they know we don't say it.

If you agree with me, Abby, what would you suggest I say to these people? — Quiet at Mealtime.

DEAR QUIET: It would be impolite of you to discourage your guests from saying grace aloud at your table if that is their custom. If you wish to remain silent, that's your privilege.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Money situation stabilizes. You know what is worth what — and why. Most important, you become aware of your own worth. Specifically, this is a time to pay and collect, to evaluate and to "set a price."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Cycle high; your judgment, timing are on target. Take initiative. Imprint your own style. Lead rather than follow. Set pace. Self-doubt can be erased. Make this a period of direct action. Then you attract success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You do best now by working in conjunction with group, organization. You can break through restrictions. But this is done in quiet, unobtrusive manner. Plainly, the necessity is to be discreet. You will understand.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on friendship, desires, transforming of hope into reality. Change is necessary. Creative thinking is essential. Romantic interests may be paramount. Your feelings tend now to dominate logic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Path is smoothed over for you. You discover allies in positions of importance. You won't get something for nothing. However, you will be provided with solid opportunities. Express gratitude for surprise gift.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on your view, your scan of events and perception of potential. Refuse to be limited. You can perfect techniques. A Pisces individual could play key role. Be perceptive. Your influence can spread.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Check accounts, take inventory. Secrets are featured. What was hidden could be revealed. Nothing now is apt to be lukewarm. It is all or nothing. Know this and respond accordingly. Don't play games.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on marriage, permanent relationships, agreements. Avoid hanging on to situation which is not constructive. Observe and learn. Get promises in writing. Aries may be in picture. Obtain accurate survey.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Cement relationship with one who shares interests and work. Make gesture which reveals sincerity. Highlight the creative. Imprint your style. You will be aided by one familiar with your personal pattern.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Spotlight on love, children, investments. Emotions tend to dominate. Personal magnetism soars. Opposite sex is drawn to you in responsive manner. Be fair to one who makes request. But don't be foolishly extravagant.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Older individual may be very much in picture. Heed voice of experience without giving up own individuality. Stress versatile approach. Make inquiries. Applies especially where home, property values are concerned.

Some Helpful Deceits For Selling a House

When you attempt to sell a house, the ideal solution is to stash all pets and children away in day camps, kennels, or steamer trunks for the duration.

While children and pets may give a house a homey, lived-in look, this lollypop-on-the-piano image is not necessarily one that you are anxious to project.

Children, who are not particularly eager to move in the first place, invariably begin by entertaining prospective buyers with a rollicking tale entitled "The Day the Storm Sewer Backed Up In the Basement." They proceed to show the now-slightly-less prospective buyer their pet mouse, and wasn't it a shame that his pregnant wife got loose and disappeared last week?

At this point, the dog unearths a greasy beef knuckle from under the sofa, drags it across the broadloom, and reburies it in a kitchen cupboard.

Don't Flush Toilet

Last week we were expecting a hot prospect. "Quit spitting orange seeds at each other! Someone is coming in 10 minutes to look at the house!" I announced. "And don't flush the toilet!" Flushing the toilet causes the water pipes to begin an emotional tirade of chattering and grumbling, ending fifteen minutes later with a frantic sob and a series of muffled hiccups.

When I opened the front door to usher in the hot prospect, our dog catapulted himself ecstatically into the visitor's waiting arms. Unfortunately, the prospect's arms weren't waiting but were engaged in removing his boots, and this unexpected assault sent him staggering backward into the rose bushes.

"I want you to notice the quality flooring here in the kitchen," I said to the prospect, who was petulantly plucking thorns from his elbows. I felt it unnecessary to explain that I wanted him to notice the flooring because directly over his head was a crack an inch wide and three feet long. It's not what you would call a noticeable crack. You'd never know that it was there at all if bits of plaster didn't fall into your soup occasionally.

I really think that he might have bought our house. But our son chose that moment to flush the upstairs toilet, and the prospect looked up in alarm just as the plaster let loose.

Asbestos Fibres Found in Tap Water, Beverages

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — If you happen to have an electron microscope in your basement, you might be able to discover a new treat in your drinking water and in some beverages like beer, wine, vermouth and soft drinks — asbestos fibres.

You would need the electron microscope because the talcum powder-like asbestos fibres are exceedingly small. For example, one fibre would weigh something like one billion millionths of an ounce.

And it would take one billion million fibres placed end to end to equal slightly less than a yard.

But, nevertheless, federal health department scientists in the health protection branch report the do exist — at least in a small number of samples of tap water in Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto and Hull and in an even smaller number of samples of commercially-produced beverages.

The somewhat academic findings — government experts says there is nothing to worry about — were published in the British journal Nature last July.

At most, according to a health department official, the Canadian findings confirm preliminary findings in a few other countries. The research is one aspect of a large effort to develop sensitive detection techniques for a host of possibly-harmful pollutants in the environment. One type of asbestos, a blue asbestos not yet detected in Canadian studies, causes health problems when inhaled. Asbestos is not suspected of causing health problems when ingested.

Tap water from Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa contained between 2 and 4.4 million fibres per quart. Tap water from Hull and raw water from the Ottawa River unfiltered contained some 9.5 million fibres per quart. In the asbestos mining community of Thetford Mines in Quebec, the tap water contained 172.7 million fibres per quart.

Studies on asbestos fibres in foods are continuing.

Egad! Six Months Later And They're Still There

By DONNA CLEMENTS

duncan cowichan

DUNCAN — Six months ago Duncan Jaycees became one of the first Jaycee units in North America to admit women members — and the reverberations are still shaking the Island.

Duncan members of both sexes seem to be generally satisfied with their history-making move, but other Jaycee units on Vancouver Island are aghast at the thought that this insidious female invasion of their all-male bastion may spread.

★

It could be an infection about as welcome as smallpox.

That, at least, was the view which crystallized here last weekend when 150 delegates from Vancouver Island and Powell River branches attended their annual mini-convention.

Although the topic was not down for official discussion, these were some of the deep-rooted fears and anxieties which surfaced in conversation with pale-face, worried-looking men:

—That the presence of women members will put a dampener on their cherished atmosphere of good-guys-together bonhomie;

—That the admission of single women as members will lead to problems with jealous wives at home;

—And that the men won't accept the women as equals.

Take Wayne Schaad, 28, of Campbell River, for instance. He says he would "fight like a fiend" if all units of Jaycees were ordered to allow women in — as Duncan was told to do by the national executive last October.

"My reasoning is based mainly on emotion rather than principle," he frankly admitted, "but I feel women allowed in right now would destroy Jaycees."

"It's a guy's night out. There will be language and joke barriers."

Theirs always has been and always should be a male organization, he insisted. "I just can't see women fitting into the Jaycee type of environment."

Another opponent of the idea, John Thalacker, 30, of the San Juan, Washington, Jaycee chapter, painted a truly horrifying picture of some of the problems that might result from integration.

Noting that one of the basic concepts of jaycees is "doing things together," he asked: "What will happen if a softball team with women in it decided to take a shower?"

What indeed.

★

There were, too, the more moderately expressed views, like that of Nanaimo Jaycee member Wayne Cobb.

He said he would like to see a female unit formed in that city as a separate entity.

"I am not a male chauvinist pig but I want a men's night out," he said. "I don't see why women have to invade everything that men do or vice versa."

Meanwhile, there were few signs of the predicted problems and frictions evident in the Duncan unit, where the five female members are all wives of Jaycees.

(Two more were to be inducted into the group Saturday evening, but many Jaycees said they would walk out of the convention if this was done.)

Duncan president Wayne Buck, 30, feels that women in his club have proved to be a "tremendous asset." Not only has it increased the club's membership to 25, Buck said his group could not have carried the mini-convention off half as successfully without the women to take care of most of the organizing.

★

"The women have been involved in all of our projects and contribute in many ways," Buck said. "Women in the club have brought a lot of respectability to it. The men watch their language, there is no gambling or horsing around. We stick strictly to business."

Past president of the local unit, Harry Girgulis, who was also chairman of the convention, said at first he was 100 per cent against women in Jaycees.

"After this convention I have reconsidered and am 100 per cent behind them."

Girgulis said that within the next five years women will belong to most units in British Columbia.

"It is inevitable and there is nothing we can do to stop it."

He said he would agree to separate units for men and women Jaycees.

"Right now Duncan's the only place where women can benefit from the training Jaycees receive. They are considered as equals in our unit."

Ellen Buck, the president's wife and one of the first women members of Jaycees, said she is proud to be a Jaycee "because she feels she is contributing more this way than she did as a Jaycee-ette (which is a subsidiary group formed of wives of Jaycees)."

★

"We don't interfere with men's night out because we don't push ourselves in when they don't want us. We have the full support of all of the men behind us."

Mrs. Buck feels separate units for men and women would just be useless repetition. "One strong club is better than two separate smaller ones."

Linda McLeod, a new member about to be inducted into the club who has attended several meetings, said: "I would like to know in what parliamentary procedure there is swearing and carrying on allowed?"

"If the men want to go out and carry on like that after the meeting they are welcome to it. Jaycees are for people and not just for men."

Mrs. McLeod said the women did not join the club for a women's liberation stand but for the betterment of themselves, the club and a common interest with their husbands.

"If the men didn't want us in we would soon know about it."

"There are Jaycees that have a very broad view," quipped Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife while discussing the controversy. Quaife and his wife Carol are both members of the local unit of Jaycees.

District Jaycee-ette Gerry Robins, of Victoria, said she would like to see women throughout Jaycee units but as a separate entity.

"I feel we should have two clubs, men and women, and let single women join. We could get together on big projects," she said.

SHARP
. . . sheer nonsense

ARTHUR, Ont. (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Wednesday night that critics of Prime Minister Trudeau have created three myths about the Liberal government, one being that it does not respect parliamentary institutions.

He told a Liberal nomination meeting in the riding of Wellington-Grey-Dufferin Waterloo: "To suggest that this government wants to muzzle the opposition or to replace our institutions with some other form of government is nothing short of ludicrous."

He noted that the Canadian House of Commons spent more than 50 days on the tax reform bill, while the British House spent six days debating British entry into the European Economic Community. This meant Canadian opposition members have lots of time to deal with legislation.

"The second great myth about this government is that the prime minister is arrogant and that he rules the cabinet and country by personal decree on the advice of the so-called supergroup, or as it is sometimes called, the French-Canadian Mafia, which is located, we are told, in the East Block.

"Well, I have my office in the East Block, too. But, you know, if there was any truth to this allegation, there are many of us who would not stay in this government."

CHARGE 'NONSENSE'

The third myth, he said, was that the present government is biased towards Quebec. He termed it "sheer nonsense" that certain ministers from Quebec are particularly close to Mr. Trudeau and therefore have an undue influence on government decisions.

"It is true that Prime Minister Trudeau has been able to attract men of very high calibre from the province of Quebec and has given them senior portfolios in the government. This is as it should be."

He noted that Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, onetime Nova Scotia premier, has been criticizing the government's regional policies.

"If he persists in these attacks," said Mr. Sharp, "someone will remind him of his record in Nova Scotia and particularly of the heavy-water plant into which tens and tens and tens of millions of dollars of the Nova Scotia taxpayers' money was poured."

He said that on a per-capita basis these taxpayers invested more money in the heavy-water plant than the citizens of the United States have invested in the space program.

"A difference, of course, is that the Americans got to the moon—and Mr. Stanfield's heavy-water plant has yet to produce a single pound of heavy water," said Mr. Sharp.

The meeting in this village 25 miles northwest of Guelph chose Allan Ross, former warden of Wellington County, as Liberal candidate for the combined counties riding in the next federal election.

MPs Back With Election Fever

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons returns to the business of the nation today with every indication that an election is uppermost in the minds of the members.

An admonition by Prime Minister Trudeau to his Liberal followers to ease off if gearing up for an election by June may be taken seriously on the Liberal benches.

But opposition spokesmen say they don't write off a spring election —Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield has been challenging Mr. Trudeau to call one —and the election fever is likely to continue to run high at least for some weeks.

The House recessed March 29 for an Easter break. The day after, Mr. Trudeau said he was giving the word to Liberals to "slow down the machine" because a June election seemed unlikely in his current thinking.

Thomas M. Bell, Conservative whip, Wednesday said his party is ready anytime but he expects Mr. Trudeau is serious in his intention to go to the people in the fall rather than the spring.

However, Mr. Bell added, there could easily be an early election if the government is "provoked in some manner."

Stanley Knowles, New Democrat House leader, said he feels Mr. Trudeau will make up his mind definitely only close to the end of April. So it would be "a sparring situation for the next couple of weeks."

Through questions in the daily question period and the way it reacts to government legislation, the opposition parties can do much to determine the mood of the Commons. So even if Liberal back-benchers accept Mr. Trudeau's suggestion to stay cool, election jockeying seems likely to continue as a main undercurrent in the Commons.

The government hasn't changed the legislative program for MPs when the recess ends today. The measures all could be shelved for election purposes.

First on the agenda today is a bill to amend the Canada Labor Code. Intended to make technological change by management a matter for negotiation by unions, the bill was introduced first in 1971 but since pulled back for redrafting.

Snow Packer Crushes Man

WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP) — An employee of the Mission Ridge ski area was crushed to death Tuesday after he leaped from a runaway snow packing machine at the ski resort.

Police said Wilbur Henry Kuhlman, 63, East Wenatchee, apparently was thrown in front of the machine after jumping. The vehicle lost its power midway up the upper chair run and began rolling down the slope, they said.

In the box at the right you can see Pinto is priced well under the leading imports. There's more. It's what you get for that price that really completes the definition of value. With Pinto you get some things that the imports mentioned above don't have.

Rack-and-pinion steering, for instance. The rack-and-pinion system is used by some of the world's great racing cars. It makes for precise, responsive handling. To you, that means you should be able to get your Pinto into that tight little parking spot a little easier.

Pinto also has a wider stance than any of the imports mentioned above. Pinto was built with a wider stance to give you greater stability. Which should come in handy on windy days on Canadian expressways.

Now some of the imports have recently been talking about the features you get in their basic price. Well, with Pinto, you get a choice of extra features. We've taken some features that a lot of people seem to like with their Pinto, and we've put them together in a group that offers particular value. Priced as a group for only one hundred dollars you can now order front disc brakes, bodyside molding, whitewalls, wheel covers, and a rear window defroster on the 2-door sedan. Pinto will then cost $2393. And that means Pinto will still be priced below all three of the leading imports.

PINTO PRICED LOWER BY $171	PINTO PRICED LOWER BY $302	PINTO PRICED LOWER BY $275

Of course, if you decide not to order this group of features, the price for Pinto is then $2293. The choice is up to you. You see, with Pinto, you don't have to pay for what you might not want. These Pinto advantages simply add up to the fact that we are trying to make sure that Pinto offers you a little more value than the competition.

Another example of this effort is our new Pinto wagon. We figured if you are interested in buying a wagon, you'd probably be most interested in the amount of cargo area you get. That's why we designed our Pinto wagon to offer you more than sixty cubic feet of cargo space. Which is more cargo space than the VW, Datsun, or Toyota wagons offer you.

Even with all the cargo space, the Pinto wagon is still only about ten inches longer than our Pinto sedan. Which means that it still offers small car maneuverability.

And our Pinto wagon at $2628, as you might expect by now, is priced under the VW, Datsun and Toyota wagons.

And a lot of value.

Taken together, all these facts lead us to feel that our Pinto offers you a little more. But don't just take our word for it. Take a closer look at Pinto for yourself. At your local Ford Dealer.

This is an explanatory paragraph. It is rather lengthy, but we want to be as clear and accurate as possible. The comparison of prices in the box above, is based on manufacturers' suggested retail prices and does not include destination and delivery; preparation and conditioning charges (included for Datsun 510); license and provincial tax. When we refer to Pinto 2-door sedan prices of $2393 and $2293, and the Pinto wagon price of $2628, these are also based on manufacturer's suggested retail prices not including destination and delivery; preparation and conditioning; license and provincial tax. And when we refer to the $100.00 group option price the figure is, once again, based on manufacturer's suggested retail price.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Emphysema Can Be Inherited

Emphysema is a disease in which the lungs lose some of their elasticity, and as a result, the person has much trouble breathing and getting air out. The word emphysema comes from a Greek word which suggests that the lungs are blown into, or inflated, and actually what happens is that the air gets into them, but then tends to stay there. As one would expect, many an emphysematous person suffers terribly from a severe shortness of breath. Commonly, the cause of emphysema seems to be years of heavy cigarette smoking.

But now I read that Drs. C. Mittman, J. Lieberman, F. Marasso, and A. Miranda, of the City of Hope Medical Centre in Los Angeles, say that one out of 10 emphysema patients has a deficiency of alpha 1-antitrypsin in the blood. Evidently then, there are two causes for emphysema — one the inherited abnormality, and the other, heavy cigarette use for many years.

The doctors have found that if a man has inherited the deficiency in antitrypsin, he can get emphysema with only a moderate amount of smoking, and he is likely to get it early in his life. Also some of his relatives are likely to be short on the antitrypsin.

The conclusion is that "cigarette exposure of more than 25 pack years (the number of packs per day times the number of years the person has been smoking) usually precedes the development of overt airways obstruction in patients with intermediate antitrypsin deficiency."

The doctors feel that it is wise for the relatives of emphysematous persons to be tested for the amount of antitrypsin in their blood, with the idea that if they have a deficiency, they may be candidates for lung disease.

One of the experts in treating emphysema, Dr. Alvan Barach, of New York City, has often said that he can greatly help emphysematous persons by giving them a small tank of oxygen which can be carried in an overcoat pocket. After breathing some oxygen, a person who has been too short of breath to move much, can get up and walk some distance comfortably.

1972 LUHRS
SEDAN CRUISERS

RUGGED SEA BOATS

Right from the start, the whole idea behind LUHRS was a boat that could handle the worst weather and run the dangerous inlets of the west coast.

MORE QUALITY AND LESS CHROME

Men who know and respect the sea have come to rely on LUHRS for honest performance, rugged construction and above all, the most boat for the dollar.

THE GREAT INDOORS

Below decks she's an outstanding example of workability and comfort. LUHRS is the kind of boat that not only suits a man's requirements but makes a woman's eyes light up too.

EXTRA VALUE

The last of a famous model. New 1972 LUHRS 32' sedan cruiser. (You saw her at the Boat Show). This boat has all the features of the Super 320 except she has fiberglassed mahogany cabin sides and decks. Full fiberglass hull, cockpit and flybridge. Powered by twin 225 H.P. Chryslers F.W.C. Dual control station. Trim tabs, hot water, water pressure and shore power. Due to the labor costs in hand finishing the cabin in solid mahogany and the publics demand for all fiberglass cruisers, LUHRS has discontinued the 28' and 32' in this model. We offer this one only, 32' LUHRS regular price $34,300 at a cash, no trade price of

BEAUTIFUL SEAVIEW
In this age of instant houses, this home STANDS UNPARALLELED IN QUALITY of construction, convenience of floor plan design and highest and best use of its prime location. This home, although it is sizeable, would best suit a smaller family or a retired couple. The house features a large, bright modern kitchen, a full size dining room and a large warm living room with a fireplace. Two of the three bedrooms are on the main floor and the third is in the basement. Most of the oak floors are covered with expensive wall-to-wall carpet. In addition to the built-in conveniences, is its location of being close to shops, schools and transportation. Because this home was not cheaply built, nor thoughtlessly designed, it has been priced in the mid-forty thousand dollar category. If quality is your desire, contact Mr. W. Cleugh to view the house and the view.

KNIT & CHAT

By MAY E. Mac LEAN

DEAR MAY:

I can't seem to find a pattern which gives specific instructions for many things. They all assume that one knows, and for a beginner it can be very frustrating. For instance, buttonhole directions, where it says "cast on two or three stitches over cast off stitches," I can't seem to do it correctly. Do you think you can help me? — Mrs. E. M., Victoria, B.C.

Buttonholes are relatively easy, but I can see where a beginner would be lost, until it has been explained fully once. Directions for buttonholes usually read something like this.

Now the first part is very simple to do, but be sure that you cast off three stitches for the buttonhole — as four stitches will have to be knit in order to cast off three stitches.

On the next row, purl to the buttonhole opening, then turn the work around so that the knit side faces you, then with the point of the right hand needle, insert into the first stitches of the left hand needle, and proceed to cast on three stitches.

Now turn the work back again to the purl side, and purl to end of row. Three stitches have been cast off on the first row, then replaced again on the following row, thus forming a buttonhole.

Some of you may care to try a vertical buttonhole. For this you knit the first four stitches, then join on another ball of yarn, and knit to end of row — no stitches are cast off. On the next row, purl with one ball of yarn to the last four stitches, then with the other ball of yarn, purl these four stitches.

Continue to work in this way, using a separate ball of yarn either side of the buttonhole, until the required depth has been worked. Break off one ball of yarn, then continue working with the remaining ball over all stitches.

It is always easiest to work the button side or band of a cardigan first. You can then mark the number of buttons, placing the top one, half an inch from the neckline, and the bottom one half an inch from the lower edge. Space the remainder evenly between.

Now as you knit the buttonhole side or band, you can compare and measure for the buttonholes against the button side or band where you have placed the markers.

Make these crochet ear-rings for the spring.

They are very simple and quick to crochet, so you will want to make several pairs as gifts!

To order Leaflet No. 6958, send 50 cents in coin or money order, PLUS a stamped self-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. Send to: May E. Mac Lean, Knit and Chat, c-o The Times.

Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering and to allow about ten days for delivery.

Sweet Peppers, Eggplant Can Also Grace Table

Sweet peppers and eggplants. How often do these appear on fall show tables here? And how many gardeners know the flavor of these highly nutritious vegetables freshly picked from the plants?

Although semi tropical, these vegetables are no more difficult to grow than tomatoes, although admittedly a few points more tender to cool weather.

By making a small sowing of seeds (A family needs only six plants of each for a start) indoors or in a heated greenhouse, and giving a bit of extra care to the growing, the first sweet peppers and an eggplant fruit should be ready for your enjoyment by the end of August at latest.

Choose short season varieties needing about 65 days to mature fruits, after setting the started plants outdoors in June.

In peppers you may find a variety name such as Vinedale, or Early California Wonder (at least a week earlier than California Wonder). In eggplant look for the oval or pear-shaped varieties since they reach an edible size earlier than the long varieties.

Sow the seeds at once indoors or in the greenhouse if you maintain a steady 70 degrees F. Use a sandy compost with a sprinkling of sand on the surface to help prevent damping-off. Seven to 10 days are needed for germination. Give strong light after the sprouts show, but keep the temperature up to a steady 70 while the seedlings develop the first pair of true leaves.

Prick out into separate small pots or into three-inch veneer plant bands as soon as you can handle the seedlings. Don't give any fertilizer while indoors for the plants must be strong.

After pricking out, they must have a minimum of 65 degrees F. at night, and higher with sun by day. During this time, prepare some means of protection for the plants when you put them into the garden later.

The most successful method we have used for seasons threatened with cool May and June nights, was the use of an 18-inch deep coldframe especially set up each season. Using rough lumber, and of a size suited to old window frame lights, the frame sloped towards the south with a 15-inch depth on the south edge.

Set in a spot protected from wind but in full sun, the glass cover was on at night and on cool days during the early part of the season.

Plants were put into a good rich mixture of rotted compost with a bit of sand for warmth. About mid May if the weather turned warm then as it does some year, the cover would be on at night and off during the day; but any chilly day, on went the cover with slight ventilation.

Watering must be kept to a minimum, for chilling of the soil slows growth with these semi tropicals. The board sides of the frame and its depth aid in conservation of soil moisture as well as of sun's warmth.

Replace the cover every night before the air chills, that is, just about sunset. This provides at least two hours of further warmth than otherwise would be experienced by the plants.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

As I have often stated in this column, there is no doubt in any bridge player's mind — from the top-echelon player down to the neophyte — that of the three departments of bridge (bidding, declarer's play, and defensive play) the most difficult to master is defensive play. The basic reason for this is that the development of principles or patterns of defence has lagged far behind the development of the principles and patterns in the two other departments. And the "book" presentation of defence has been woefully inadequate throughout the years.

As a natural consequence of the deficiency in defensive techniques, a defender frequently has to guess (especially at the non-expert level) as to what to do; and he hopes that his partner will correctly interpret the guesser's guess. Thus it is inevitable that ambiguity will often arise in defensive play. As a case in point, observe today's deal.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH

WEST

SOUTH

◊ Q 9 7 2
♣ A 8 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◊	2 ♣	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

West's opening lead of the spade queen was captured by South's ace. A low diamond was then led, and the board's king taken by East's ace. East now came back with the club king, but the club lead was belated. South won the trick with his ace and put his cards down claiming an overtrick: two spades, three hearts, four diamonds, and one club, for a total of ten tricks.

As is evident, had West led his deuce of clubs (East's bid suit) at trick one, South would have incurred a two-trick set, since he would have to attack the diamond suit after winning his club ace. When he did, East would make five club tricks, plus the diamond ace.

The blame for South's victory (or East-West's demise) must be placed squarely on West's shoulders, although perhaps the latter was not aware of any wrongdoing; and since he probably thought that he had to guess what to lead initially, he naturally selected his good suit, spades.

In expert circles (although it is not spelled out in most books on play), it is accepted doctrine that when partner has doubled a three notrump contract, and he has bid a suit, his double is an inviolable command to the doubler's partner to lead that suit. Of course, if West had been familiar with this conventional type of double, he would not have had to rely on guesswork for his opening lead; and he would have led his lowly, singleton deuce of clubs.

IRA Chief 'Hates Father'

LONDON (CP) — The stern disciplinarian who dominates the Irish war against British troops reveres the memory of his Ulster mother and resented his English father and stepmother.

In fact, each time Sean MacStiofain barks out an order to keep the Ulster war boiling, he may in part be expressing a deep inner hatred linked with his early life in East London.

For Sean MacStiofain, the so-called chief of staff of the Provisional Irish Republican Army, was born in London John Stephenson, the son of an Ulster mother and an English father who fought in the two world wars.

Sean was about 10 years old when his mother died and a year later his father, a solicitor's clerk, remarried.

"He didn't like me and told me so," says the stepmother who found her stepson headstrong and self-willed.

STEPMOTHER SILENT

But until Daily Mail reporters traced the stepmother, now, 63, she had kept silent, uncertain that the boy she knew as John Stephenson had become the unbending IRA leader who rejected an Ulster truce and ordered his IRA men to continue bombing, burning and assassinations without letup.

"I never thought he would have turned out to be like this," says the stepmother, who remarried after Sean's father died in 1959. "I wonder what his father would have thought about him. Thank God he never lived to see it."

At the age of 14, when his father was in the Second World War, Sean left school and drifted from job to job. At 17, he was still drifting but determined to learn Gaelic and to live in Ireland. He joined the non-violent Gaelic League in London and the Daily Mail says that it was about this time that he met IRA men.

After a national service stint with the RAF, he got a rail job in London. His associations with IRA extremists came to the attention of the police who were investigating arms smuggling into Ireland.

Police found that one of his associates was Cathal Goulding, now head of the Official IRA in Dublin which competes against the Provisionals for Roman Catholic loyalty in Ulster. The two became close friends and tried to establish a construction firm which later went bankrupt.

Two years later, in 1953, Sean — who was still known as John Stephenson — and Goulding were caught by police as they stole a quantity of arms and ammunition from an Essex cadet school. They were sentenced to prison for eight years.

It was while in prison that Stephenson became determined to become completely fluent in Gaelic: to change his name to the Gaelic version and to leave England.

With his wife and their two children, he settled in Navan, near Dublin. Sean became a paid organizer for the Gaelic League in Dublin and later gained promotion within IRA ranks.

UN TO ATTACK ILLICIT DRUGS

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — The UN will try to raise 100 million to finance a worldwide campaign over the next five years to check the illicit production, circulation and use of dangerous drugs.

About 160 projects are planned, and it is expected that between 40 and 50 of them will be put into operation during 1972.

They include schemes to help poppy growers cultivate other crops, to train and equip police, customs officers and coastguards to intensify the fight against illegal traffic in drugs, and projects to treat and rehabilitate addicts.

Dr. Carl Schurmann, manager of the UN fund for drug abuse control, said during a recent visit to New York that his appeal for funds, launched six months ago, had so far netted $3 million. Two-thirds of the money was donated by the United States, and the rest by several other governments, including Canada, West Germany and France.

Dr. Schurmann, former Dutch ambassador to Washington, said he would be making personal contact with as many governments as possible, and was hopeful that the $100 million target could be reached.

UN experts in Geneva wrestling with drug problems are hopeful of getting helpful advice from China, which once had probably the world's biggest drug problem and now has virtually eradicated it.

Dr. Schurmann said Peking would be sending its first delegation to UN economic and social council meeting in Geneva in May, when the drug question will figure prominently on the agenda.

Dad Meets His Daughter for the First Time . . . She's 26

CALGARY — Martin Muru, who had never met his youngest daughter, found a happy ending to a long story this week.

The story began in Estonia during the Second World War when he became separated from his expectant wife, Mary, and their two small children.

Before they could be rejoined, he was forced to flee the country and after the war came to a farm operated by relatives north of Calgary.

"It took three years before I could find out if they were all still living."

Finally, he contacted them in Russia but they were not allowed to emigrate.

In 1967, Mrs. Muru was given permission to come to Canada but by then the two oldest children were married and settled with families.

Kersti was refused a visa.

"For the past 4½ years we have been trying to get our daughter here," Muru said.

"We have tried so hard and today is the day she is coming.

"You know, it has been a long time for us and there were many sad things before we came together again.

"But it is not good to remember them now. They are over. The main thing is we are happy today."

PITTSBURGH — "People steal weird things these days," remarked the FBI agent who telephoned a news release involving what appeared to be a fairly routine offence — interstate transportation of stolen property.

The agent said that federal authorities Monday arrested John Irving Balough, 33, of Cairnbrook on charges that he stole a $40,850 earth-moving machine from Eckles Brothers Construction Co. of Winchester, Va., April 1.

If convicted, the self-employed truck driver could receive a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

DUBLIN — The president of Sinn Fein, the political voice of the undergraound Irish Republican Army's official wing, said Tuesday his organization has been briefing U.S. Senator Edward Kennedy regularly.

Thomas McGiolla told reporters: "I do not say he started his propaganda campaign when we got in touch with him. I cannot recall exactly when he spoke out. But we have been making our views known to him."

OTTAWA — Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger, looking fit at 68 despite his years as a missionary in Africa, denied Tuesday that he has come back to Canada for the last time.

"I don't know where it comes from," he said in an interview, referring to a recent report that illness would prevent resumption of his labors for the handicapped in Cameroon.

TRENTON, N.J. — STATE Education Commisioner Carl Marburger ordered the dismissal Tuesday of a teacher in Bernards Township who underwent a sex change operation.

But he directed the local school board to seek a pension for Paula Grossman and to award her back pay.

Marburger said he ordered the dismissal because "of the potential her presence in the classroom presents for psychological harm to the students. . ."

HACKMAN

OTTAWA — Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield are expected to be among about 250 PMs, senators, diplomats and others taking part in the seventh annual National Prayer Breakfast Friday on Parliament Hill.

Robert McCleave (PC — Halifax-East Hants), co-chairman of the breakfast in the West Block of Parliament along with Senator Elsie Enman (L — Prince Edward Island) announced the plans Tuesday.

OTTAWA — Dr. Allen Davidson, who established the first community mental health centre in British Columbia, retires Thursday after 41 years of continuous public service.

HOLLYWOOD — Gene Hackman had some laconic answers for questioners the day after receiving an Oscar as the best actor of 1971.

Asked if he could say what it meant to him to win an Academy Award, Hackman had a dead pan reply. "No," he said. "I can't." Did winning an Oscar give him the chance to pick and choose roles? "No."

JAKARTA, Indonesia — A 60-member Canadian trade mission left here today after a four-day visit.

Mission leader Lawrence Dampier, chairman of the Vancouver Board of Trade, said that his mission had explored the possibilities of Canadian capital investment in Indonesia.

ATLANTA — Mrs. Claudine Jackson says there's a problem in her southwest Atlanta neighborhood — it's a snake pit.

"I don't go into the backyard without a hoe," she said. She said about 90 were caught last week, 14 on Sunday, 17 on Monday and six on Tuesday.

Reds Storm Provincial Capital

Times News Services

SAIGON — North Vietnamese troops storming the capital of An Loc today took control of at least half the town.

It was the second major assault on the town 60 miles north of Saigon and the North Vietnamese vowed they would capture An Loc and establish a provisional capital for the Viet Cong.

Spearheaded by captured South Vietnamese tanks, the North Vietnamese fought bitter street battles with the defenders. The South Vietnamese sent out an urgent appeal for reinforcements and one military source in Saigon said "the outlook there is very bad."

A South Vietnamese military spokesman said that as many as 30 tracked vehicles had been destroyed or damaged in the fierce street fighting. He did not say how many were on each side.

Official reports reaching Saigon said the northern half of An Loc was in North Vietnamese hands and tanks had taken over the airfield.

It was the first time the North Vietnamese succeeded in entering An Loc in their offensive, now in its 15th day.

"There's a perimeter government defensive position on the southern edge of town. That's about the only friendly place in this whole country up here."

The relief column remained stalled because of Communist shellings. The commander of the column's spearhead, an armored cavalry regiment, was killed when a rifle bullet hit him in the head as he flew by helicopter over the battle zone checking on his tanks.

The commander of the military region surrounding Saigon, said at least 10 tanks had been destroyed inside the town and that 200 North Vietnamese had been killed in the first few hours of heavy fighting.

The South Vietnamese said 641 government troops were killed and 2,166 were wounded in the week ending April 8 compared with 466 dead and 1,075 injured in the previous week. Saigon claimed killing 2,987 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers compared with 2,150 the previous week. There were 12 U.S. combat deaths.

Elsewhere in the war, the North Vietnamese shelled four U.S. bases along the central and northern coast and the coastal city of Qui Nhon, 275 miles northeast of Saigon. A rocket attack on the Da Nang air base killed 14 South Vietnamese civilians, wounded 11 American servicemen and 25 South Vietnamese civilians, destroyed an American plane and damaged nine U.S. and South Vietnamese aircraft. Another American was killed and two were wounded in other attacks.

The United States sent its B-52 bombers deeper into North Vietnam than ever before to attack the Bai Thuong MiG air base 150 miles northwest of the demilitarized zone plus fuel and supply depots. Radio Hanoi claimed that four U.S. planes were shot down, including a B-52, but informants in Saigon said no U.S. planes were lost.

★ NIXON ARRIVES TODAY

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — President Nixon, who arrives in Ottawa for a three-day visit at 3:30 p.m. today (Victoria time) was cloistered at nearby Camp David earlier today to put the finishing touches on a speech that could mean the success or failure of the journey.

Few U.S. officials expect anything approaching meaningful negotiations during the visit. It comes at a time when economic disagreements beset the two countries.

About 2½ hours of private discussions between Nixon and Canadian Prime Miniter Trudeau are scheduled, and they are expected to touch on differences only in broad terms.

Nixon faces a re-election test in November and Trudeau must call an election before mid-1973, making meaningful negotiations even more difficult.

Housing Funds Primed

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Wednesday he will introduce legislation "within a few weeks" to encourage the flow of private funds into housing.

Mr. Basford told a meeting of the Toronto Home Builders Association the legislation has three main thrusts. It will establish a central mortgage bank which will trade in residential mortgages, permit the creation of real estate investment trusts in Canada and create a new mortgage instrument —the variable-term mortgage loan.

"To meet the necessary targets for housing in Canada over the next decade will call for an investment of more than $41 billion," he said.

"We are rapidly moving to a point where an annual investment in the order of $5 billion will be required to satisfy the financial needs of residential construction programs."

As an example of the kind of money he hoped to attract through the new financing vehicles, Mr. Basford pointed to the $84 billion in assets held by life insurance companies, chartered banks, trust and loan companies, and trusteed pension plans.

"At the end of 1970, only 20 per cent of the total assets of these institutions were allocated to mortgages in various types of real estate. Indeed; in the last 15 years, that ratio has only been exceeded on two occasions.

IRA Violence Soars; RCs Plead for Lull

BELFAST (UPI — Irish Republican extremists today mounted their most extensive bombing and shooting campaign since Britain imposed direct rule over Northern Ireland two weeks ago.

The British army said an elderly woman was killed and at least eight other persons were injured or wounded. Scores of shops and a number of vehicles were wrecked in bombing and shooting incidents throughout most of the province.

The intensive violence came despite renewed appeals from Roman Catholic civil rights groups to the Irish Republican Army to end its bombing and shooting campaign or risk civil war in Northern Ireland.

The army said Mrs. Elizabeth McAuley was the 302nd person killed in three years of violence when a 100-pound gelignite bomb blasted a draper's store in Ballymoney, a predominantly Protestant village 40 miles northwest of Belfast Thursday. Her husband was cut and bruised in the explosion.

PIGS HAVE CLASS, AS WELL AS ULCERS

RIDGETOWN, Ont. (CP) — Pigs are like people and they have their ulcers to prove it.

Pigs have a fairly well-defined social structure and tend to ostracize those who try to ignore it.

Like humans, pigs do a lot better when they are happy and satisfied.

J. R. Morris, livestock specialist at Ridgetown College of Agriculture Technology in this community about 15 miles east of Chatham, Ont., said in an interview Wednesday pork producers have to understand the pig's social world in order to produce pork economically.

In other words, a happy and healthy pig is a fat pig — and a fat pig brings in more money.

★ Peace Bid Argued

PARIS (UPI) — On April 1 President Nixon secretly asked the Vietnamese Communists to resume the peace talks today but the Communists responded with an invasion of South Vietnam, U.S. Ambassador William Porter said.

A Viet Cong spokesman charged "there has never been any such message for us. Only yesterday, the American side rejected our latest appeal to resume the talks."

U.S. delegation spokesman Stephen Ledogar dismissed the Viet Cong claim. He indicated the U.S. administration has sent the message to North Vietnam which has failed to inform the Viet Cong.

Meanwhile in Washington, 17 Senate and 34 House of Representatives members expressed concern to Nixon over what they said "appears to be a major re-escalation of U.S. involvement in the war."

In a letter to the president, they asked him for a full report on contemplated U.S. military action in Indochina.

"If news reports are accurate, our country is now assembling in Southeast Asia one of the largest air armadas in military history," the Members of Congress for Peace Through Law told Nixon.

Strike Front Broken

Times News Services

MONTREAL — A strike by a common front of unions representing 210,000 Quebic public service workers ran into some resistance in its third day today.

Union leaders of three locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing some 8,500 Hydro-Quebec employees, withdrew from the common front and instructed its members to obey court injunctions.

But the situation in the province's hospitals continued to deteriorate, despite efforts by the provincial government to enforce back-to-work injunctions at institutions considered in a critical state.

Jean-Paul L'Allier, public service minister, said in Quebec City Wednesday night the general effects of the province-wide strike were serious but not alarming.

CITED FOR CONTEMPT

He announced that the government has obtained contempt of court citations against unions which have failed to provide essential hospital services in the Quebec City area.

The government's moves indicated a cautious reaction to the telegram from the Association of Hospitals of the Province of Quebec warning that patients at 14 hospitals for the

Quake Diggers Find 3 Alive

GHIR, Iran (Reuter) — Three persons were dug out alive Wednesday from the ruins of this village, devastated by Monday's earthquake — now known to have claimed about 3,800 lives in Iran's southern province Fars.

Rescue workers reached them after they had been trapped for more than 50 hours.

One was a woman of 70, another an elderly man, and the third a boy.

The women's face was dusty and caked with dried blood. She could hardly walk, but refused a stretcher and shuffled along to a medical tent with a soldier holding each arm.

Discovery of the three survivors was an almost unhoped-for success for the soldiers, police and villagers still digging in the rubble.

No immediate details were available about the new tremors, but the radio described one as "very strong."

CFAX PRESIDENT DEFENDS SCHEME

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

Victoria's CFAX radio president Clare Copeland said today he doesn't understand why NDP leader Dave Barrett attacked him and his companies' operations Wednesday.

Barrett has charged that Copeland has associated himself with the "Social Credit propaganda machine" because he was an initiator of a government advertising program called Ask Your Provincial Government.

The NDP leader told a press conference Wednesday Copeland's role in helping develop Ask Your Provincial Government has made the operations of a CFAX-owned legislative news service here "suspect."

"What he's trying to do is bring in an association of B.C. Radio News with this other communication vehicle we sold to them (the government)."

SUBSIDIARY

Copeland said Ask Your Provincial Government was an idea he developed with New Westminster radio station CKNW manager Mel Cooper after reading the Keith Davey Senate report on the Mass Media.

'IMPOSSIBLE' HAPPENED

Lorrell was born April 8. So was her mother Joyce. So was her grandmother and her great-grandmother.

Mrs. Eilhelm, 27, a housewife, from Woodanilling, 200 miles southeast of Perth, said Monday: "All those who said it couldn't be done pay — in champagne."

A gynaecologist said it was an "impossible coincidence."

Lunch Bucket Menu for Cabinet?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial cabinet has invited itself to dinner — more than 10 dinners, in fact — most of its prospective hosts are less than enthusiastic.

The cabinet is planning a tour of the province later this spring, and mayors of municipalities scheduled to be visited received letters Wednesday asking them to sponsor dinners or luncheons for the ministers.

"I think we should all get them lunch buckets," said Mayor Gordon Nichol of Kamloops. "The last time they were here it cost the city $1,400 and people complained."

Mayor Pete Lester of Prince Rupert said: "Ours will probably be a no-host luncheon."

"They'll be handing out $1,000 bills wherever they go," Mayor Lester said. "What can you do? After all, the man's (W. A. C. Bennett) the premier of the province. Last time he was up here he was handing out superports. But he got so excited he gave ours to Williams Lake instead. (That's 300 miles from salt water.)

"I suppose the least we can get for a $350 lunch is between $50,000 and $100,000 — in announcements."

Mayor Lester said the letter, from Deputy Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace, said:

"I wonder if you and your council would like to host and honor the premier with a luncheon at 12 noon Monday, May 29. The premier will have two presentations to make to you on that date, one of historical significance."

The letter went on to ask for confirmation of the lunch and requested the complete guest list by May 5.

"I suppose they want the guest list because they can make other arrangements if they don't like who we've asked," Mayor Lester quipped.

Mayor F. E. Devito of Trail said he wouldn't mind giving the cabinet a luncheon if the announcement had come in a different form.

"The impression was that they were coming and we should do something about it. Normally one would expect we would have been asked in a discreet way whether we would like to have them."

Mayor Harold Moffat of Prince George and H. W. Buckle of Kimberley said they were in favor of the tour and didn't mind giving the cabinet a meal.

When Time Runs Out

At the University of Victoria it's — ugh — exam time. And students waiting today for the gymnasium to open and the grim business to get under way, huddle for that traditional very-last minute cram session. With the moment of truth at hand, the line-up mirrors mixture of concentration, tense humor, slightly frenzied confusion — and fatalism.

POLLEN SHOULD 'KNOW BETTER'

Collective bargaining without the right to strike is "ridiculous," a Victoria union leader said today.

Murray Drew, president of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America, was replying to city mayor Peter Pollen who said Wednesday the use of the strike by civil servants is the first step towards anarchy.

Pollen said collective bargaining is the right of all employees, but the use of the strike weapon is not.

Drew said the strike is the only way employees can put economic pressure on an employer — or vice-versa in a lockout — and he said Pollen "should know better" because of his background in labor relations.

Pay Increase Motion Goes Before Council

Victoria council will decide today whether to grant itself a pay increase.

A motion to grant the mayor and aldermen a 6.5 per cent wage hike is on the order paper, but it received some opposition even before reaching the council chamber.

Ald. Percy Frampton registered his doubt about the measure earlier today, passing up the chance to sign the written motion but putting his signature on others.

The mayor is now paid $15,000 a year and aldermen each receive $3,600.

Raising the question of aldermanic pay in formal council session was not unexpected.

Mayor Peter Pollen said earlier he thought the aldermen greatly deserved a raise but he thought the chief magistrate's salary is "adequate."

The present motion makes no distinction between mayor and aldermen, calling for a straight 6.5 per cent increase.

Gas Station Gulf Widens

Firm's Intentions Revealed in Letter

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Further evidence that Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. knew the Hillside-Scott service station would continue selling gasoline is contained in a company executive's letter written last February.

Victoria Ald. Harold Olafson last week promised no more concessions for oil companies after the Hillside-Scott service station put up a Mohawk Oil sign in March.

Olafson charged that Gulf Oil, which last year operated a Royalite oil outlet on the lot, had promised to reduce the number of its outlets in Greater Victoria.

This promise came when Gulf applied for a rezoning at the nearby Hillside-Shelbourne intersection in order to build a large oil outlet and service centre.

A letter obtained by the Times says Gulf Oil as late as Feb. 9, 1972, intended to keep the Hillside-Scott outlet in operation, either through a lease to another oil company or under the Gulf name.

The letter is signed by D. S. McDonald, manager, Metro Motorist Market, of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.

It was written in reply to a letter from the owner of the Hillside-Scott property, who had asked about Gulf's intentions.

UNAWARE

Sutherland asked by way of a statement in his Feb. 4 letter to Gulf Oil:

"In view of the fact that the Gulf Oil Co. Ltd. have built a large unit approximately one block away, it is now my understanding that Gulf Oil will relinquish the lease in favor of either another oil company or myself."

STATION STAYED

Gulf's D. S. McDonald answered: "We have made tentative arrangements to lease this service station, but, failing this, it will be operated by Gulf Oil Canada."

These arrangements did not transpire because in mid-March, a Mohawk sign appeared on the property.

City hall became concerned with the development. Business and sign erection permits had apparently not been correctly applied for, and the oil station remained in operation despite Gulf's original statement that it was phasing out smaller service stations.

The minutes of the council meeting Jan. 19, 1971, record a Gulf Oil executive, W. O. C. Wingham stating Gulf's intention to consolidate its operations and reduce the number of outlets from 36 to 16 in the Greater Victoria area.

The Hillside-Scott outlet was included in the discussion because Gulf was applying for permission to build the larger Gulf outlet about a block away.

TIRES FLATTENED AT STRUCK PLANT

Air was let out of the tires of a number of fork lift trucks and other vehicles overnight at strikebound Butler-Lafarge Ltd. on Bay Street.

Company president W. T. Crampton said today the incident was "only a minor thing, no damage."

He said some of the vehicles have been used in the yard during the strike because supervisors are loading for non-union operators coming in for materials.

PROTEST MARCH

Student Amchitka Antiwar Committee will hold a march Saturday protesting Canadian involvement in the Vietnam war.

Protesters will meet at 1 p.m. at Centennial Square, then march to the legislative buildings.

SAAC spokesmen said the march will be part of a Canada-wide rally for an immediate end to the war.

Big Pay Hike For Prisoners

A massive wage boost is on the way for a small group of local construction workers — without negotiations or even the hint of a strike.

Inmates of William Head minimum security prison, who are now paid a maximum of 85 cents a day for regular prison duties, will get $1.75 an hour if they are selected to work on a prison construction job starting around the middle of next month.

Jail superintendent Gamaliel Milner said today he has been getting "quite a few applications" from prisoners who want to work on the project and receive the federal minimum wage.

The experimental move in the prison reform program was announced six months ago by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer. If successful at William Head, it will be introduced at other establishments.

Milner said the new pay rate will come into effect when work starts about the middle of May on building a new complex of vocational shops, with some outside contractor help but mainly with prison labor.

About five inmates will be employed initially and later a maximum of 20.

Men chosen will have to be at "a certain position" in their sentence, he explained, so that the work counts as part of their pre-release program. Long-term prisoners will not be eligible.

Milner said the selected workers will be either those with prison training in the various trades or those with outside experience in the construction industry.

'INDUSTRIAL TEMPO'

A time schedule for the project is being drawn up, he said, and the prisoners will have to work at "industrial tempo" equivalent to any normal construction job to qualify for the $1.75 an hour pay.

Prisoners will have to pay the prison for room, board and clothing and will have to pay income tax and unemployment insurance.

As the men will have paid into the unemployment insurance fund, they will be able to collect from it if they remain unemployed after release.

The money will also enable prisoners to help support their family and save money for their eventual release.

FARQUHAR

By BRIAN BUTTERS

University of Victoria president pro tem Hugh Farquhar steeled himself and members of the UVic senate Wednesday night for a "vicious attack" on himself which never came about — at least in the public part of the senate meeting.

Farquhar, in his president's report, told senate that "several people have come to me in the last few days to warn me that I would be the object of a vicious attack here tonight."

"I was told that there is some sort of nefarious plot to try to discredit me in front of the senate," he said.

However, whatever Farquhar feared never came up in the public part of the meeting. An in-camera session was held following the public portion.

Farquhar said he found it "deplorable" that members of the senate would use what he termed "subterfuge" and "cloak and dagger stuff."

When pressed for names of the people involved in the alleged plot, Farquhar said he did not want to elaborate in public.

He said he only knew what was told to him "in confidence" and that he would not normally bring such matters up in senate.

"It is the role of senate to deal with academic matters, not with personal vendettas."

Farquhar then said he had tried as best he could to solve some university problems at the departmental level. It is believed it was meetings he had with departments in the faculty of fine arts that aroused internal controversy.

"Some of these matters are very delicate, very difficult to deal with. If there is interference by senate or anyone else it will just make my job that much tougher," he said.

Farquhar's remarks came at the end of his report, in which he announced that the board of governors will make several appointments following their meeting this month.

Appointments expected are: chairman of the theatre department, vacated by Ralph Allen, who leaves to accept a post with the University of Tennessee; chairman of the department of linguistics, whose head, J. P. Vinay, has been appointed dean of arts and science, replacing John Climenhaga; dean of the faculty of graduate studies, where A. R. Fontaine is dean pro tem.

Farquhar said no appointment will likely come this month for the position of dean of fine arts, with present dean Peter Garvie leaving to take a post with the University of Texas, or for the position of administration vice-president, with Jack Kyle leaving to take a top administrative post with the metropolitan government of Winnipeg.

From the PM, Rocks on the Greenhouse

THERE ARE TIMES when it occurs to me that Pierre Elliott Trudeau, the sardonic philosopher at Ottawa, goes out of his way to make square-generation Canadians frothing mad. Probably this is good for us. It takes our minds off our troubles, sets the adrenalin flowing, and may even improve the digestion.

The most recent Trudeau utterance to rouse the national dander has to do with work and people who would avoid it in their search for self-fulfilment. These, the PM suggested, might prefer to exercise their right to live on unemployment insurance.

I'm not sure that Canadians were ever hit with so startling a viewpoint before. Coming from a national leader of an Old Line party, it was sheer heresy. It landed like a rock on a greenhouse to embarrass determined Liberals and scandalize the daylights out of all who believe in a day's work for a day's pay.

Several apologists have tried to convince me that Trudeau didn't really mean it the way it sounded, or was misquoted, or that he probably added a rider which escaped the hearing of his audience.

Tosh and hogwash! I think that Trudeau spoke his mind, as he will still be doing when his time comes to mount the tumbril for a trip to the political guillotine.

There's also a disconcerting possibility that the aristocrat who shattered the prime-ministerial mould will still be making more sense than his executioners.

That admission comes hard, because there is much about Trudeau that causes my hackles to bristle. He can charm a bird off its perch when the mood is on him, but he is emphatically not a man of the people. Never having known poverty or unemployment at first hand, his attitudes toward both are coldly academic.

He impresses me as brilliant dilettante playing at politics, but not taking the game too seriously.

Nor can I agree with him that the person capable of working — and with work available — has the right that Trudeau claims for him. Unless unemployment insurance has strayed far from its original intent, it remains merely a rainy-day umbrella paid for by the employed to tide them over periods of unemployment.

But setting this personal, conditioned opinion aside, I'm forced into some uncomfortable conclusions about this most disconcerting prime minister.

If he does not match up to the Canadian dream (an ectoplasmic something that takes its shape from the beliefs and prejudices of the dreamer) no politician deals so bluntly with the Canadian fact as we find it in the 1970s.

By way of demonstration, consider a low-keyed Trudeau statement made on an earlier occasion. The gist of it was that if we are to achieve the national independence we profess to want, the cost will be increased government control and a reduction of individual freedoms.

In political terms, the remark was unpardonable. We were actually being warned that we couldn't expect to have our cake and eat it too.

The fact that the warning was timely doesn't make it any more palatable. However, it induces a reluctant respect for the truth-teller, even though it may not add to our affection for him.

My own reaction to many Trudeau statements is first a huffy and total rejection, then a later and cooler weighing. Take that outrageous nonsense about the right to a free ride while seeking self-fulfilment.

Perhaps it's a generational hangup, but I find the Trudeau thesis totally repugnant. Yet those who share my view may very well be dragged kicking and screaming into an era when work will be the privilege of Canadians who find self-fulfilment in it, and guaranteed income the right of those who don't.

Fantastic? Inevitable might be a better word. The signs are already plain.

Trudeau may pay for his attitudes and his mistakes at the next federal election. We could find ourselves settling down with a national sigh of relief under a Conservative leader who would be much easier on the blood pressure.

If so, it's possible that we'll have cause to remember Pierre Elliot Trudeau as a prime minister cursed with the habit of telling us what we should be hearing rather than what Canadians would prefer to hear.

$50,000 for Freighter?

The freighter Vanlene, aground off Vancouver Island's west coast for a month, is for sale for scrap, a Vancouver underwriter's office said today.

Dennis Morrell, staff surveyor with Salvage Association London, said two or three parties have expressed interest but there have been no bids yet.

The 8,500-ton Vanlene struck a reef alongside Austin Island in Barkley Sound March 14 while en route to Vancouver from Japan with a cargo of 300 cars. While some of the cars were salvaged, more than half were ruined by sea water.

While Morrell declined to speculate what the freighter might bring, another source said earlier it might fetch around $50,000.

The costs involved in reaching it, cutting it up and transporting the scrap are factors reducing its value, the source said.

Reds Storm Provincial Capital

Times News Services

SAIGON — North Vietnamese troops storming the capital of An Loc today took control of at least half the town.

It was the second major assault on the town 60 miles north of Saigon and the North Vietnamese vowed they would capture An Loc and establish a provisional capital for the Viet Cong.

Spearheaded by captured South Vietnamese tanks, the North Vietnamese fought bitter street battles with the defenders. The South Vietnamese sent out an urgent appeal for reinforcements and one military source in Saigon said "the outlook there is very bad."

A South Vietnamese military spokesman said that as many as 30 tracked vehicles had been destroyed or damaged in the fierce street fighting. He did not say how many were on each side.

Official reports reaching Saigon said the northern half of An Loc was in North Vietnamese hands and tanks had taken over the airfield.

It was the first time the North Vietnamese succeeded in entering An Loc in their offensive, now in its 15th day.

A U.S. pilot flying over the beleagured town radioed to a 20,000-man relief column 15 miles to the south:

"There's a perimeter government defensive position on the southern edge of town. That's about the only friendly place in this whole country up here."

The relief column remained stalled because of Communist shellings. The commander of the column's spearhead, an armored cavalry regiment, was killed when a rifle bullet hit him in the head as he flew by helicopter over the battle zone checking on his tanks.

The commander of the military region surrounding Saigon, said at least 10 tanks had been destroyed inside the town and that 200 North Vietnamese had been killed in the first few hours of heavy fighting.

The South Vietnamese said 641 government troops were killed and 2,166 were wounded in the week ending April 8 compared with 466 dead and 1,073 injured in the previous week. Saigon claimed killing 2,987 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers compared with 2,150 the previous week. There were 12 U.S. combat deaths.

Elsewhere in the war, the North Vietnamese shelled four U.S. bases along the central and northern coast and the coastal city of Qui Nhon, 275 miles northeast of Saigon. A rocket attack on the Da Nang air base killed 14 South Vietnamese civilians, wounded 11 American servicemen and 25 South Vietnamese civilians, destroyed an American plane and damaged nine U.S. and South Vietnamese aircraft. Another American was killed and two were wounded in other attacks.

The United States sent its B-52 bombers deeper into North Vietnam than ever before to attack the Bai Thuong MiG air base 150 miles northwest of the demilitarized zone plus fuel and supply depots. Radio Hanoi claimed that four U.S. planes were shot down, including a B-52, but informants in Saigon said no U.S. planes were lost.

NIXON ARRIVES TODAY

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — President Nixon, who arrives in Ottawa for a three-day visit at 3:30 p.m. today (Victoria time) was cloistered at nearby Camp David earlier today to put the finishing touches on a speech that could mean the success or failure of the journey.

Few U.S. officials expect anything approaching meaningful negotiations during the visit. It comes at a time when economic disagreements beset the two countries.

About 2½ hours of private discussions between Nixon and Canadian Prime Miniter Trudeau are scheduled, and they are expected to touch on differences only in broad terms.

Nixon faces a re-election test in November and Trudeau must call an election before mid-1973, making meaningful negotiations even more difficult.

For Trudeau, more than Nixon, across-the-border relations are a major political issue, making major concessions before the elections virtually impossible.

Housing Funds Primed

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Wednesday he will introduce legislation "within a few weeks" to encourage the flow of private funds into housing.

Mr. Basford told a meeting of the Toronto Home Builders Association the legislation has three main thrusts. It will establish a central mortgage bank which will trade in residential mortgages, permit the creation of real estate investment trusts in Canada and create a new mortgage instrument — the variable-term mortgage loan.

"To meet the necessary targets for housing in Canada over the next decade will call for an investment of more than $41 billion," he said.

"We are rapidly moving to a point where an annual investment in the order of $5 billion will be required to satisfy the financial needs of residential construction programs."

As an example of the kind of money he hoped to attract through the new financing vehicles, Mr. Basford pointed to the $84 billion in assets held by life insurance companies, chartered banks, trust and loan companies, and trusteed pension plans.

"At the end of 1970, only 20 per cent of the total assets of these institutions were allocated to mortgages in various types of real estate. Indeed, in the last 15 years, that ratio has only been exceeded on two occasions.

IRA Violence Soars; RCs Plead for Lull

BELFAST (UPI — Irish Republican extremists today mounted their most extensive bombing and shooting campaign since Britain imposed direct rule over Northern Ireland two weeks ago.

The British army said an elderly woman was killed and at least eight other persons were injured or wounded. Scores of shops and a number of vehicles were wrecked in bombing and shooting incidents throughout most of the province.

The intensive violence came despite renewed appeals from Roman Catholic civil rights groups to the Irish Republican Army to end its bombing and shooting campaign or risk civil war in Northern Ireland.

The army said Mrs. Elizabeth McAuley was the 302nd person killed in three years of violence when a 100-pound gelignite bomb blasted a draper's store in Ballymoney, a predominantly Protestant village 40 miles northwest of Belfast Thursday. Her husband was cut and bruised in the explosion.

PIGS HAVE CLASS, AS WELL AS ULCERS

RIDGETOWN, Ont. (CP) — Pigs are like people and they have their ulcers to prove it.

Researchers have found swine have their bosses, their followers, their worries, their power struggles and their environmental stresses — just like humans.

Pigs have a fairly well-defined social structure and tend to ostracize those who try to ignore it.

Like humans, pigs do a lot better when they are happy and satisfied.

J. R. Morris, livestock specialist at Ridgetown College of Agriculture Technology in this community about 15 miles east of Chatham, Ont., said in an interview Wednesday pork producers have to understand the pig's social world in order to produce pork economically.

In other words, a happy and healthy pig is a fat pig — and a fat pig brings in more money.

Peace Bid Argued

PARIS (UPI) — On April 1 President Nixon secretly asked the Vietnamese Communists to resume the peace talks today but the Communists responded with an invasion of South Vietnam, U.S. Ambassador William Porter said.

A Viet Cong spokesman charged "there has never been any such message for us. Only yesterday, the American side rejected our latest appeal to resume the talks."

U.S. delegation spokesman Stephen Ledogar dismissed the Viet Cong claim. He indicated the U.S. administration has sent the message to North Vietnam which has failed to inform the Viet Cong.

Meanwhile in Washington, 17 Senate and 34 House of Representatives members expressed concern to Nixon over what they said "appears to be a major re-escalation of U.S. involvement in the war."

In a letter to the president, they asked him for a full report on contemplated U.S. military action in Indochina.

"If news reports are accurate, our country is now assembling in Southeast Asia one of the largest air armadas in military history," the Members of Congress for Peace Through Law told Nixon.

Strike Front Broken

Times News Services

MONTREAL — A strike by a common front of unions repsenting 210,000 Quebec public service workers ran into some resistance in its third day today.

Union leaders of three locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing some 8,500 Hydro-Quebec employees, withdrew from the common front and instructed its members to obey court injunctions.

The provincial police riot squad moved in to watch about 250 pickets around the courthouse building in downtown Montreal and ensure access to the building for justice officials.

But the situation in the province's hospitals continued to deteriorate, despite efforts by the provincial government to enforce back-to-work injunctions at institutions considered in a critical state.

Jean-Paul L'Allier, public service minister, said in Quebec City Wednesday night the general effects of the province-wide strike were serious but not alarming.

He announced that the government has obtained contempt of court citations against unions which have failed to provide essential hospital services in the Quebec City area.

The government's moves indicated a cautious reaction to the telegram from the Association of Hospitals of the Province of Quebec warning that patients at 14 hospitals for the

Quake Diggers Find 3 Alive

GHIR, Iran (Reuter) — Three persons were dug out alive Wednesday from the ruins of this village, devastated by Monday's earthquake — now known to have claimed about 3,800 lives in Iran's southern province of Fars.

Rescue workers reached them after they had been trapped for more than 50 hours.

One was a woman of 70, another an elderly man, and the third a boy.

The women's face was dusty and caked with dried blood. She could hardly walk, but refused a stretcher and shuffled along to a medical tent with a soldier holding each arm.

Discovery of the three survivors was an almost unhoped-for success for the soldiers, police and villagers still digging in the rubble.

No immediate details were available about the new tremors, but the radio described one as "very strong."

CFAX PRESIDENT DEFENDS SCHEME

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

Victoria's CFAX radio president Clare Copeland said today he doesn't understand why NDP leader Dave Barrett attacked him and his companies' operations Wednesday.

Barrett has charged that Copeland has associated himself with the "Social Credit propaganda machine" because he was an initiator of a government advertising program called Ask Your Provincial Government.

The NDP leader told a press conference Wednesday Copeland's role in helping develop Ask Your Provincial Government has made the operations of a CFAX-owned legislative news service here "suspect."

"What he's trying to do is bring in an association of B.C. Radio News with this other communication vehicle we sold to them (the government)."

SUBSIDIARY

Copeland said Ask Your Provincial Government was an idea he developed with New Westminster radio station CKNW manager Mel Cooper after reading the Keith Davey Senate report on the Mass Media.

Copeland explained that Ask Your Provincial Government is a means for the government to communicate poli-

Lunch Bucket Menu for Cabinet?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial cabinet has invited itself to dinner — more than 10 dinners, in fact — most of its prospective hosts are less than enthusiastic.

The cabinet is planning a tour of the province later this spring, and mayors of municipalities scheduled to be visited received letters Wednesday asking them to sponsor dinners or luncheons for the ministers.

"I think we should all get them lunch buckets," said Mayor Gordon Nichol of Kamloops. "The last time they were here it cost the city $1,400 and people complained."

Mayor Pete Lester of Prince Rupert said: "Ours will probably be a no-host luncheon."

"They'll be handing out $1,000 bills wherever they go," Mayor Lester said. "What can you do? After all, the man's (W. A. C. Bennett) the premier of the province. Last time he was up here he was handing out superports. But he got so excited he gave ours to Williams Lake instead. (That's 300 miles from salt water.)

"I suppose the least we can get for a $350 lunch is between $50,000 and $100,000 — in announcements."

Mayor Lester said the letter, from Deputy Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace, said:

"I wonder if you and your council would like to host and honor the premier with a luncheon at 12 noon Monday, May 29. The premier will have two presentations to make to you on that date, one of historical significance."

The letter went on to ask for confirmation of the lunch and requested the complete guest list by May 5.

"I suppose they want the guest list because they can make other arrangements if they don't like who we've asked," Mayor Lester quipped.

Mayor F. E. DeVito of Trail said he wouldn't mind giving the cabinet a luncheon if the announcement had come in a different form.

"The impression was that they were coming and we should do something about it. Normally one would expect we would have been asked in a discreet way whether we would like to have them."

Mayor Harold Moffat of Prince George and H. W. Buckle of Kimberley said they were in favor of the tour and didn't mind giving the cabinet a meal.

When Time Runs Out

At the University of Victoria it's — ugh — exam time. And students waiting today for the gymnasium to open and the grim business to get under way, huddle for that traditional very-last minute cram session. With the moment of truth at hand, the line-up mirrors mixture of concentration, tense humor, slightly frenzied confusion — and fatalism.

POLLEN SHOULD 'KNOW BETTER'

Collective bargaining without the right to strike is "ridiculous," a Victoria union leader said today.

Murray Drew, president of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America, was replying to city mayor Peter Pollen who said Wednesday the use of the strike by civil servants is the first step towards anarchy.

Pollen said collective bargaining is the right of all employees, but the use of the strike weapon is not.

Drew said the strike is the only way employees can put economic pressure on an employer — or vice-versa in a lockout — and he said Pollen "should know better" because of his background in labor relations.

Pay Increase Motion Goes Before Council

Victoria council will decide today whether to grant itself a pay increase.

A motion to grant the mayor and aldermen a 6.5 per cent wage hike is on the order paper, but it received some opposition even before reaching the council chamber.

Ald. Percy Frampton registered his doubt about the measure earlier today, passing up the chance to sign the written motion but putting his signature on others.

The mayor is now paid $15,000 a year and aldermen each receive $3,600.

Raising the question of aldermanic pay in formal council session was not unexpected.

Mayor Peter Pollen said earlier he thought the aldermen greatly deserved a raise but he thought the chief magistrate's salary is "adequate."

The present motion makes no distinction between mayor and aldermen, calling for a straight 6.5 per cent increase.

Gas Station Gulf Widens

Firm's Intentions Revealed in Letter

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Further evidence that Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. knew the Hillside-Scott service station would continue selling gasoline is contained in a company executive's letter written last February.

Victoria Ald. Harold Olafson last week promised no more concessions for oil companies after the Hillside-Scott service station put up a Mohawk Oil sign in March.

Olafson charged that Gulf Oil, which last year operated a Royalite oil outlet on the lot, had promised to reduce the number of its outlets in Greater Victoria.

This promise came when Gulf applied for a rezoning at the nearby Hillside-Shelbourne intersection in order to build a large oil outlet and service centre.

A letter obtained by the Times says Gulf Oil as late as Feb. 9, 1972, intended to keep the Hillside-Scott outlet in operation, either through a lease to another oil company or under the Gulf name.

The letter is signed by D. S. McDonald, manager, Metro Motorist Market, of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.

It was written in reply to a letter from the owner of the Hillside-Scott property, who had asked about Gulf's intentions.

UNAWARE

Sutherland asked by way of a statement in his Feb. 4 letter to Gulf Oil:

"In view of the fact that the Gulf Oil Co. Ltd. have built a large unit approximately one block away, it is now my understanding that Gulf Oil will relinquish the lease in favor of either another oil company or myself."

STATION STAYED

Gulf's D. S. McDonald answered: "We have made tentative arrangements to lease this service station, but, failing this, it will be operated by Gulf Oil Canada."

These arrangements did not transpire because in mid-March, a Mohawk sign appeared on the property.

City hall became concerned with the development. Business and sign erection permits had apparently not been correctly applied for, and the oil station remained in operation despite Gulf's original statement that it was phasing out smaller service stations.

The minutes of the council meeting Jan. 19, 1971, record a Gulf Oil executive, W. O. C. Wingham stating Gulf's intention to consolidate its operations and reduce the number of outlets from 36 to 16 in the Greater Victoria area.

The Hillside-Scott outlet was included in the discussion because Gulf was applying for permission to build the larger Gulf outlet about a block away.

TIRES FLATTENED AT STRUCK PLANT

Air was let out of the tires of a number of fork lift trucks and other vehicles overnight at strikebound Butler-Lafarge Ltd. on Bay Street.

Company president W. T. Crampton said today the incident was "only a minor thing, no damage."

He said some of the vehicles have been used in the yard during the strike because supervisors are loading for non-union operators coming in for materials.

PROTEST MARCH

Student Amchitka Antiwar Committee will hold a march Saturday protesting Canadian involvement in the Vietnam war.

Protesters will meet at 1 p.m. at Centennial Square, then march to the legislative buildings.

SAAC spokesmen said the march will be part of a Canada-wide rally for an immediate end to the war.

Big Pay Hike For Prisoners

A massive wage boost is on the way for a small group of local construction workers — without negotiations or even the hint of a strike.

Inmates of William Head minimum security prison, who are now paid a maximum of 85 cents a day for regular prison duties, will get $1.75 an hour if they are selected to work on a prison construction job starting around the middle of next month.

Jail superintendent Gamaliel Milner said today he has been getting "quite a few applications" from prisoners who want to work on the project and receive the federal minimum wage.

The experimental move in the prison reform program was announced six months ago by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer. If successful at William Head, it will be introduced at other establishments.

Milner said the new pay rate will come into effect when work starts about the middle of May on building a new complex of vocational shops, with some outside contractor help but mainly with prison labor.

About five inmates will be employed initially and later a maximum of 20.

Men chosen will have to be at "a certain position" in their sentence, he explained, so that the work counts as part of their pre-release program. Long-term prisoners will not be eligible.

Milner said the selected workers will be either those with prison training in the various trades or those with outside experience in the construction industry.

'INDUSTRIAL TEMPO'

A time schedule for the project is being drawn up, he said, and the prisoners will have to work at "industrial tempo" equivalent to any normal construction job to qualify for the $1.75 an hour pay.

Prisoners will have to pay the prison for room, board and clothing and will have to pay income tax and unemployment insurance.

As the men will have paid into the unemployment insurance fund, they will be able to collect from it if they remain unemployed after release.

FARQUHAR

By BRIAN BUTTERS

University of Victoria president pro tem Hugh Farquhar steeled himself and members of the UVic senate Wednesday night for a "vicious attack" on himself which never came about — at least in the public part of the senate meeting.

Farquhar, in his president's report, told senate that "several people have come to me in the last few days to warn me that I would be the object of a vicious attack here tonight."

"I was told that there is some sort of nefarious plot to try to discredit me in front of the senate," he said.

However, whatever Farquhar feared never came up in the public part of the meeting. An in-camera session was held following the public portion.

Farquhar said he found it "deplorable" that members of the senate would use what he termed "subterfuge" and "cloak and dagger stuff."

When pressed for names of the people involved in the alleged plot, Farquhar said he did not want to elaborate in public.

He said he only knew what was told to him "in confidence" and that he would not normally bring such matters up in senate.

"It is the role of senate to deal with academic matters, not with personal vendettas."

Farquhar then said he had tried as best he could to solve some university problems at the departmental level. It is believed it was meetings he had with departments in the faculty of fine arts that aroused internal controversy.

"Some of these matters are very delicate, very difficult to deal with. If there is interference by senate or anyone else it will just make my job that much tougher," he said.

Farquhar's remarks came at the end of his report, in which he announced that the board of governors will make several appointments following their meeting this month.

Appointments expected are: chairman of the theatre department, vacated by Ralph Allen, who leaves to accept a post with the University of Tennessee; chairman of the department of linguistics, whose head, J. P. Vinay, has been appointed dean of arts and science, replacing John Climenhaga; dean of the faculty of graduate studies, where A. R. Fontaine is dean pro tem.

Farquhar said no appointment will likely come this month for the position of dean of fine arts, with present dean Peter Garvie leaving to take a post with the University of Texas, or for the position of administration vice-president, with Jack Kyle leaving to take a top administrative post with the metropolitan government of Winnipeg.

From the PM, Rocks on the Greenhouse

THERE ARE TIMES when it occurs to me that Pierre Elliott Trudeau, the sardonic philosopher at Ottawa, goes out of his way to make square-generation Canadians frothing mad. Probably this is good for us. It takes our minds off our troubles, sets the adrenalin flowing, and may even improve the digestion.

The most recent Trudeau utterance to rouse the national dander has to do with work and people who would avoid it in their search for self-fulfilment. These, the PM suggested, might prefer to exercise their right to live on unemployment insurance.

I'm not sure that Canadians were ever hit with so startling a viewpoint before. Coming from a national leader of an Old Line party, it was sheer heresy. It landed like a rock on a greenhouse to embarrass determined Liberals and scandalize the daylights out of all who believe in a day's work for a day's pay.

Several apologists have tried to convince me that Trudeau didn't really mean it the way it sounded, or was misquoted, or that he probably added a rider which escaped the hearing of his audience.

Tosh and hogwash! I think that Trudeau spoke his mind, as he will still be doing when his time comes to mount the tumbril for a trip to the political guillotine.

There's also a disconcerting possibility that the aristocrat who shattered the prime-ministerial mould will still be making more sense than his executioners.

That admission comes hard, because there is much about Trudeau that causes my hackles to bristle. He can charm a bird off its perch when the mood is on him, but he is emphatically not a man of the people. Never having known poverty or unemployment at first hand, his attitudes toward both are coldly academic.

He impresses me as brilliant dilettante playing at politics, but not taking the game too seriously.

Nor can I agree with him that the person capable of working — and with work available — has the right that Trudeau claims for him. Unless unemployment insurance has strayed far from its original intent, it remains merely a rainy-day umbrella paid for by the employed to tide them over periods of unemployment.

But setting this personal, conditioned opinion aside, I'm forced into some uncomfortable conclusions about this most disconcerting prime minister.

If he does not match up to the Canadian dream (an ectoplasmic something that takes its shape from the beliefs and prejudices of the dreamer) no politician deals so bluntly with the Canadian fact as we find it in the 1970s.

By way of demonstration, consider a low-keyed Trudeau statement made on an earlier occasion. The gist of it was that if we are to achieve the national independence we profess to want, the cost will be increased government control and a reduction of individual freedoms.

In political terms, the remark was unpardonable. We were actually being warned that we couldn't expect to have our cake and eat it too.

The fact that the warning was timely doesn't make it any more palatable. However, it induces a reluctant respect for the truth-teller, even though it may not add to our affection for him.

My own reaction to many Trudeau statements is first a huffy and total rejection, then a later and cooler weighing. Take that outrageous nonsense about the right to a free ride while seeking self-fulfilment.

Perhaps it's a generational hangup, but I find the Trudeau thesis totally repugnant. Yet those who share my view may very well be dragged kicking and screaming into an era when work will be the privilege of Canadians who find self-fulfilment in it, and guaranteed income the right of those who don't.

Fantastic? Inevitable might be a better word. The signs are already plain.

Trudeau may pay for his attitudes and his mistakes at the next federal election. We could find ourselves settling down with a national sigh of relief under a Conservative leader who would be much easier on the blood pressure.

If so, it's possible that we'll have cause to remember Pierre Elliot Trudeau as a prime minister cursed with the habit of telling us what we should be hearing rather than what Canadians would prefer to hear.

$50,000 for Freighter?

The freighter Vanlene, aground off Vancouver Island's west coast for a month, is for sale for scrap, a Vancouver underwriter's office said today.

Dennis Morrell, staff surveyor with Salvage Association London, said two or three parties have expressed interest but there have been no bids yet.

The 8,500-ton Vanlene struck a reef alongside Austin Island in Barkley Sound March 14 while en route to Vancouver from Japan with a cargo of 300 cars. While some of the cars were salvaged, more than half were ruined by sea water.

While Morrell declined to speculate what the freighter might bring, another source said earlier it might fetch around $50,000.

The costs involved in reaching it, cutting it up and transporting the scrap are factors reducing its value, the source said.
